Community Builds Own Beach

From toddlers to grandparents, they all helped yesterday morning when a working bee was organized to help provide safe swimming in the Gorge for kiddies living on Forshaw and Shirley Roads in Esquimalt. The rocky beach is being covered with sand and logs will mark off the safe swimming area. The work should be finished by the end of June when the kiddies start school holidays. —(Colonist photo by Jim Ryan.)

Patients Neglected, Staffers Charge

'Mental' Nurses Rebel

Hospitals Understaffed, Men Ill-Paid, Overworked

British Columbia mental hospitals will return to a state of "bedlam" unless hospital staffs receive higher pay and more persons are trained in psychiatric nursing to relieve the present shortage of personnel.

This charge was made yesterday by a psychiatric nurse at Colquitz Mental Hospital. Another male nurse at the home, phoned for confirmation by the Colonist, backed up the charges.

Just a month ago a private bulletin from the provincial health department stated that patients in Terrace mental home ar not being "efficiently cared for" because of the staff shortage, he said.

TERRIBLE STATE

"This is a terrible situation in a mental hospital," he said of Terrace. "Patients go without their baths. Patients lie in their wet blankets. They lie in their own excreta."

He noted that the provincial government was considering building a new mental hospital.

"We can't staff the hopsitals we have," he said. "We have 300 patients out here and not one qualified occupational therapist."

He blamed the "terribly poor" pay and long hours for the shortage of skilled personnel.

A nurse's aide starts his pay at $195 a month, and over six years his salary rises to $245. Top pay for a psychiatric nurse is $271. Nurse in charge, responsible for 300 patients and a staff of 18 nurses and 24 aides, receives $291, he stated. The work week is 44 hours long.

STRIKE POSSIBLE

The male nurse's telephone call to the Colonist was prompted by a report that 153 stationary engineers employed by the government have voted to strike June 26.

"The nursing staff themselves in B.C.'s mental hospitals will very likely go on strike," he said.

Although backing the engineers, who include steam plant employees at Colquitz Mental Hospital, the psychiatric nurse asked, "How I am supposed to nurse the patients when there is no hot water to wash them, or to clean clothes, or cook, I don't know."

The government should have settled this pay issue long ago, he declared.

He further charged that there is no machinery set up on Vancouver Island to train people to become psychiatric nurses.

Not enough nurses are being trained at Essondale, on the mainland, to provide new staff for the home here, he said.

Disaster Swamps St. Louis

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (UP)—New flash floods hit the St. Louis area towns last night in a major disaster that swept victims to their deaths and forced more than 4,000 persons to flee their homes.

Rampaging creek waters, powered by record-breaking rains, killed at least 15 persons, seven of them members of a farm family whose car was caught by a 15-foot wall of water near Beaufort. At least four persons were missing.

The two-day storm system also sent tornadoes and storms across Illinois, killing at least three persons and raising the 24-hour death count to 18.

The St. Louis floods followed the heaviest continous rain ever known there—nearly nine inches in 14 hours.

There was no sign of a respite as twisters blocked two Iowa highways with trees.

Speedway Driver Injured

Western Speedway driver Ken Dobbie, 27, of 2607 Wark, was admitted to Jubilee Hospital last night with back injuries after his car rolled during a race.

Dobbie was knocked unconscious for a short time in the crash and, when he awoke, complained of pains in the back. X-Rays were taken at the hospital.

World's Record Leap

Up and over soars pole vaulter Bob Gutowski at Austin, Texas, with the black-and-white strike bar set two inches higher than the present world mark of 15 feet, 7¾ inches. The Occidental College athlete had another leap of 15 feet, 8¼ inches awaiting ratification when he produced this phenomenal jump.—(AP Photofax.)

Death Clears the Streets But Children Will Be Back

By COURTNEY TOWER

A bunch of shouting children played softball in the large backyard area of Monarch Crescent in Belmont Park last evening, the first time they have done so in months.

Throughout the navy housing development, children played in other spacious back yards and in the several playground areas that are available. Only one young lad was seen skipping out in the street.

There are 1,050 children in Belmont Park and all were under the control or watchful eyes of adults.

But it took the death of one of them, blonde little Dorothy McDormand (see page 3), who had a child's love for candy and careless disregard of danger, to stop them playing in the residential area's one highly dangerous place—the street.

The children will go back soon to riding tricycles and kiddie-cars on the streets, darting out in front of moving vehicles and carelessly toddling along the middle of the road.

Residents, every one of whom has at least one child, agree that it is amazing that, in the more than six years Belmont Park has been in existence, little Dorothy has been the only traffic fatality.

Only the extreme caution used by all drivers, and a 15-mile-an-hour speed limit rigidly enforced by the RCMP, have prevented further fatalities, they add.

But it is more a matter of educating the children to stay off the streets than anything the RCN, which runs the development, can do, it seems.

Mrs. T. H. Graham was watching her husband play softball with a bunch of youngsters.

"They're playing out back now," she said, "but it's the first time in months. They just keep going back to playing in the street. It's only lucky all the drivers are so careful.

"Only a few weeks ago I almost had the same thing happen," she added. "A little child darted out with his doll buggy and I ran over the buggy—and I was going less than 10 miles an hour.

"We have a lot of playground areas, but it's impossible to organize anything here when couples are continually being drafted away.

"We're leaving next month, ourselves," said Mrs. Graham, whose daughter, Claudia, 3, was an inseparable friend of Dorothy.

Mrs. Edward H. Aubrey, wife of the petty officer who is tow manager, suggested that a crosswalk and "stop when occupied" sign be placed on Belmont at the store outside which Dorothy died.

Others said that for a long time now they have been trying to get sidewalks in the park. They have got nowhere with the navy, they said.

Others wondered if that would make any difference.

It's so bad that when the fire department gets a call the trucks have to just crawl through the district to keep what might be a routine matter from turning into a tragedy.

Everyone commended the Veteran Stages bus drivers as always being particularly careful, and felt sorry for the driver in yesterday's tragedy, Arthur Claude Cole of Langford.

'Massive' Skeleton Unearthed in B.C.

BEACH GROVE, B.C. (CP) — Skeleton of a "massive" native Indian wearing a hand-beaten copper breast plate and entombed with a predatory bird and animal has been unearthed here by a digging crew led by Dr. C. E. Borden of the department of anthology at UBC.

Skeleton was estimated as more than 2,000 years old.

Beach Grove is about 20 miles from Vancouver.

Rehearsal for War?

Red Sub Fleet Flaunts Power In Seven Seas

PARIS (NANA)—French naval authorities are convinced that vast Soviet underwater fleet is engaged in unprecedented world-wide manoeuvres designed to test the U-boat strategy the Kremlin would employ in the event of a major war.

The French naval staff, in co-operation with NATO, is compiling intelligence data on Russian submarine activity which has been suddenly stepped up in recent weeks. On the basis of this information, indications are that Soviet submarine squadrons currently are operating in every part of the world and in every ocean.

FLEET OF 500

Since the beginning of May, portions of the Soviet sub fleet, estimated now to total 500 ocean-going vessels, have appeared as far apart as Newfoundland and the Philippine Sea. Soviet U-boats have been sighted in the Indian Ocean and the English Channel.

An unidentified submarine, thought certainly to be Russian, was seen in mid-May off Durban, South Africa. American Sixth Fleet and French warships, cruising respectively in the Eastern and Western Mediterranean, have reported numerous sonar trackings of unidentified U-boats, apparently trailing them at medium distance. Among Western naval sources, there is no doubt these subs are Russian.

Naval authorities here said on several occasions Russian U-boats have deliberately surfaced in areas where they were sure to be seen.

SHOWING POWER

French officers suspect that the Russians are out to prove to the Western naval powers, and particularly the U.S., that their submarine fleet is capable of striking major blows simultaneously in all oceans, something neither the Germans nor Japanese ever did in the last war.

From this angle, a high-ranking French officer explained, the Russian activity is a pyschological warfare tactic. But, he added that its purely military significance cannot afford to be overlooked by the West.

"From all appearances, this is a major naval manoeuvre with tremendous implications," he said. "The Russians never before have atempted it, though they have for some years possessed the world's largest underwater striking force.

"So this action must be accepted as a warning that Moscow is now confident its submarine strength is so overwhelming it would constitute a decisive threat in war, certainly to sea communications between North America and Europe, but probably also between North America and the Far East, including Australia."

Vice-Regal Affair

Chiefs Stay Apart At Garden Party

OTTAWA (BUP)—Prime Minister St. Laurent and his successor-apparent, John Diefenbaker, were star guests among 8,000 at Governor-General Vincent Massey's annual garden party yesterday.

Crowds created traffic jams in front of the vice-regal residence half an hour before the party was to start, as everyone sought a chance to meet the two main figures in the current government crisis.

They both performed their accustomed roles, but did not meet.

Mr. St. Laurent, correctly attired in black morning coat, striped trousers, grey waistcoat, and grey topper, was the first to shake hands with the Governor-General after he took the royal salute on the balcony steps, overlooking the acres of lawns at Rideau Hall.

Mr. Diefenbaker, in short black director's coat, striped trousers and pearl grey tie, arrived 30 minutes later with Mrs. Diefenbaker, wearing a beige linen suit and hat. An army aide-de-camp led the Diefenbakers through the crowd to meet Mr. Massey on the lower lawn, next to the huge canvas marquees, where fruit juices, sandwiches, cakes and coffee were served.

Only two federal cabinet ministers were seen in the huge crowd, Immigration Minister J. W. Pickersgill, who won re-election in Monday's voting, and Mines Minister George Prudham, who did not seek re-election.

The diplomatic corps was out in force, as well as leaders of the churches and the judiciary. And it was a party for everyone who wanted to go. Invitations were sent to everyone who had signed Mr. Massey's guest book during the past year.

Diefenbaker to Take Top Spot This Week

By TOM GREEN
Colonist Ottawa Correspondent

OTTAWA—Conservative leader John G. Diefenbaker will assume the prime ministership of Canada this week, announce his cabinet and represent Canada at the British Commonwealth prime ministers' conference opening in London on June 26.

These quick-moving developments are confidently predicted on Parliament Hill. Mr. Diefenbaker will meet on Monday with Liberal Prime Minister St. Laurent, after which Mr. St. Laurent will present his resignation to the Governor-General.

The armed service vote gave the Liberals one more riding—in the Yukon.

ALL ABOARD

With G. E. Mortimore

THE other day I came across a reference to the floating gardens of Kashmir.

There was a period in my life when I spent six months or so thinking about a holiday in Kashmir, and I nearly got there, but not quite. (I missed the trip by about [illegible] years.)

But ever since that time, by virtue of my plans that never quite ripened, I have felt that I owned a share of Kashmir.

So when I read in a magazine about the device they have in Kashmir of piling weeds and mud on rafts, and growing vegetables in the stuff, my interest quickened.

It seems that some Kashmiris have learned to lower big twisty sticks to the bottom of the lake, pull up an assorted mass of gumbo, and lay it on a floating frame made of crossed sticks. In this, they grow excellent tomatoes and melons.

I have a house on a lake. I stretched chicken-wire between two logs, laboriously raked up evil-smelling debris from the lake bottom and piled it on my small raft.

The process took many days. When I judged the floating garden to have reached a sufficient height, I planted it with a few test vegetables: pumpkins, a marrow, cucumbers and tomatoes.

From the rank odors that rise above my floating compost heap, one would judge it to be fertile. Sad to say, it isn't. The plants are very pale, spindly little creatures. The water is lapping only a few inches below their roots. Those plants probably have wet feet.

However, that isn't all. There are about a dozen broods of mallard ducks just now, ranging in size from small blobs of fluff to gangs of great feathered hobbledehoys. All of them look upon my floating garden as an aquatic rest-room, installed for their especial benefit.

I haven't the heart to chase them away. But when the plot is vacant, I sometimes go down to inspect it, and straighten out the poor undernourished little plants that have been bent double and gnawed ragged.

The floating garden was an experiment. It doesn't work. Not when ducks are present, anyway.

A couple of days ago, however, I tried a new crop: watercress. I put in a couple of roots, and they seem to be thriving. My only hope is that ducks don't like spicy food.

Air, Glamour Free

Prettiest service station attendant in Victoria yesterday was Pat Russell, who filled tanks to raise funds for the Greater Victoria Retarded Children's Association. She and other members of the Beta Sigma Phi Sorority will receive a percentage of the day's take for the association. Some $130 was also raised at a rummage sale yesterday.—(Colonist photo by Jim Ryan.)

Colonist Again Sponsor

Swim Classes Lauded

Civic leaders in Greater Victoria joined yesterday to commend The Daily Colonist for instituting for the fifth consecutive year a program of free learn-to-swim classes at Elk Lake's Happyland.

Acting Mayor Arthur Dowell said that the series of classes starting July 2 is an outstanding community service "when one realizes that many lives may be saved in the future because of the advantages afforded these youngsters in learning how to swim."

Oak Bay Reeve Fred Norris said the Colonist deserved a "pat on the back for public spiritedness" in sponsoring the swim classes.

Reeves Arthur Ash of Saanich and A. C. Wurtele of Esquimalt added their praise of the program, saying that it had become a summer-months institution of considerable community value.

Colonist publisher Seth Halton answered that the newspaper is "proud to sponsor the classes again this year as a public service."

The free swimming classes will also be available for youngsters between eight and 14 at Duncan's Queen Margaret's School swimming pool starting Saturday, July 6.

An application form for boys and girls who wish to attend the classes this year is on the lower section of this page.

Classes in Victoria and Duncan will again be under the direction of Mrs. Marge Naysmith, one of Canada's foremost swim instructors.

There is absolutely no charge for the eight-week course, which will be held in July and August.

Victoria children who require transportation will be charged $2.50 for the eight return trips to Elk Lake, however. This low rate is made possible by co-operation of the Vancouver Island Coach Lines and bus tickets may be purchased at The Daily Colonist business office at 1215 Broad Street, and the editorial office at 2631 Douglas Street, from now until June 21.

Well-Known Victorian Mrs. Olive Carter Dies

A well-known Victorian, Mrs. Olive Carter, Patricia Bay Highway, died yesterday in St. Joseph's Hospital. She was 54.

Mrs. Carter was the wife of Bill Carter, public works superintendent, who retired a year ago.

She is survived by her husband at home, two sisters, Mrs. Amy Turner, Goldstream, and Mrs. Pearl Kenyon, Victoria, and a brother, Gordon W. Cooper of Langford, and nieces and nephews.

Canon George Biddle will officiate at funeral services at Sands Mortuary at 3.15 p.m. Tuesday. Cremation will follow.

Christians have long sought a greater understanding of Christ Jesus' healing method. Many have not been satisfied that Christian healing applied only in that day.

Just over ninety years ago, a devout New England woman, Mary Baker Eddy, discovered the scientific law of the Christ method of healing and named her discovery Christian Science. For some years she tested its healing efficacy for herself and others. Then in 1875 she gave to the world

Old People's Villa Wins Public Favor

Public response to news that a villa to house 74 single pensioners was being considered as a joint centennial project for the Greater Victoria area was overwhelmingly in favor, Glenn Hope, secretary of the Kiwanis Village Society, said yesterday.

Villa has been planned for two years by the society, to be built adjoining the present Kiwanis Village. It would house 74 pensioner widows and widowers at the beginning, and would include facilities to be shared with Village occupants.

Another project, also being considered by the committee, is the construction of a youth centre with full facilities, including an ice rink.

Mr. Hope said society officials were "tremendously happy" with the public's reaction.

A meeting of the society will be held Monday to collate information about the response, and it is likely that a delegation will be chosen to represent the society at a meeting of the Centennial Committee Thursday.

At Thursday's meeting Coun. Charlie Mann, who represents Oak Bay municipality on the committee, will report on the scheme. He invited the Kiwanis Village Society to send a delegation to the meeting to answer any questions posed by the committee.

An architect's model of the proposed villa will be displayed in a downtown store window next week to let people see more clearly what the scheme entails.

Little Girl Dies Under Bus Wheel

A blonde two-year-old girl was crushed to death by the wheels of a bus at Belmont Park yesterday.

Her father, PO Gerald McDor-mand, was 60 miles at sea at the time of the accident. His ship, HMCS Athabaskan, put into Nanoose Bay and PO McDormand was rushed to his home at 406 Monarch Crescent.

An inquest into the death of the girl, Dorothy, will be held Tuesday, Dr. E. C. Hart said.

Accident took place on Belmont Road, main thoroughfare of the navy housing area adjoining Colwood, in front of Belmont Park Red and White food store.

A Veteran Stages Ltd. bus, which had stopped to leave a parcel for the store, ran over the girl as it started to move in low gear, police said.

Apparently the little girl was out of sight of the driver, whom police identified as Arthur Claude Cole of 814 Goldstream Avenue, was rushed to his home at 406 Longford.

PASSENGER NOTICED

The tragedy was first noticed by a passenger in the bus, Mrs. Hugo Rudolphi, 1012 Goldstream, who shouted to the driver to stop after he had driven about 75 feet.

The driver said he thought a bump felt in the bus as the girl was struck, was due to wheels dropping into a pot-hole at the roadside.

Harold Perrin, proprietor of the store, said the road was clear when he picked up the parcel from the bus, and he heard of the tragedy only after he had entered the store.

Mrs. McDormand, at her nearby home, heard of the death of her girl from a neighboring child. A doctor-administered sedatives to calm her.

Her fourth child, seven-year-old William, was attending a swimming class at HMCS Naden and was not informed of the accident until about two hours later.

Body of the little girl was taken by ambulance to McCall's funeral home. Her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Earl, live at 1326 Yates.

PO McDormand, a navy man for about 15 years and a member of the crew of HMCS Sioux during the Korean War, works in the engine room of the Athabaskan.

Three East-West Links

Island Roads Nearly Ready

Three new roads connecting the east and west coasts of Vancouver Island could be completed this fall and open to travel.

Alaska Pine and Cellulose Ltd. has completed its section at the Jordan River end of the southernmost route to Port Renfrew. Also, an eight-mile portion which is being constructed by B.C. Forest Products Ltd. at Port Renfrew is nearing completion.

The works department has a crew working on the four remaining miles preparing to open the road for traffic by this fall, highways minister P. A. Gaglardi said.

MacMillan and Bloedel Ltd. has completed its portion of the Sproat Lake-Long Beach road, which now extends 16 miles beyond Klitsa Lodge on Sproat Lake.

Grading is also reported to be completed on a nine-mile stretch being constructed by B.C. Forest Products between Long Beach and the mouth of Kennedy River.

The two sections will be joined by an eight-mile stretch along the Kennedy River, which the province has undertaken to build, and expects to complete this fall or early next year.

Northernmost route to the west coast, between Campbell River and Gold River is also nearing completion by the Elk River Timber Co. Ltd. who are logging off an eight-mile right-of-way between their eastern road system and the Tahsis Company's western logging road layout.

Mental Hospitals' Staff Up in Arms

"We have had only one replacement in the last six years."

"Psychiatric nursing is no fool's job," he said. "It requires two year's training at least."

Unless provision for staff training is made, B.C. mental hospitals will "go back to bedlam days when incapable and untrained persons handled mental patients," he said.

Another eight or nine nurses should be available at the Colquitz home to allow the work week to be reduced to 40 hours and improve the present "minimum" of treatment of patients.

The hospital, however, does have a good building and location, and patients are well-fed, well-clothed, and fairly well entertained, he said.

More "progressive" treatment would call for individual rooms instead of wards as at present with beds two feet apart and aisles four feet wide, he said.

"Then we could treat people like people, and not like animals, herding them together."

The nurse's story was backed by a colleague, who said that although Vancouver Island patients were being cared for, they were not receiving the extent of care that they could get if there was sufficient trained staff available.

He said the B.C. government was calling for applications from women to fill positions at Terrace as it could not attract men at the wages offered.

"Women cannot fill the positions that men can handle in mental hospitals," he said. "Women do not have the emotional stability or the strength that is needed sometimes."

Accused was also ordered to pay $50 damages.

Macmillan Writes Bulganin:

Here's How to Ward Off War

Bluntly-Worded Note Lays Cards on Table

LONDON (UP) — British Prime Minister Harold Macmillan bluntly warned Soviet Premier Nikolai Bulganin yesterday that the East-West conflict cannot be settled without the re-unification of Germany.

The British leader, in a 2,000-word personal message to Bulganin, also declared that the greatest need at present was an agreement on both conditional and atomic disarmament.

"Some measure of agreement on this issue would be a real contribution to the reduction of world tension and to the settlement of the many problems which now confront us," Macmillan told the Kremlin.

The prime minister lashed out against the "policy of repression" being pursued in Hungary by a regime being maintained in power by the presence of Soviet troops." He said this was a serious obstacle to improved relations.

Macmillan described the present Hungarian Red regime as "an alien system imposed . . . by force." His message appealed to Russia to help dispel the threat of war by constructive co-operation in Europe, the Middle East and in the five-power disarmament talks now under way in London.

"We must wish to preserve our children and grandchildren from a third and perhaps final tragedy," the firmly-worded British note stated.

Chiding the Kremlin for its "policy of repression" in Hungary the note declared: "We have different points of view on many great issues on the most fundamental basis of life."

"But these differences ought not to prevent us from making some kind of advance towards a more sensible relationship," he added.

"Against this background" (of British criticism of Russian policy) Macmillan expressed readiness to improve mutual relations, expand trade and increase Anglo-Soviet contacts and cultural exchanges.

At the same time the British Prime Minister told Bulganin bluntly that "I should have greater confidence in the prospects of improved Anglo-Soviet relations if the Russian service of the BBC was not jammed in the Soviet Union." To this he added the need for an unrestricted sale of British books and newspapers.

He urged that "Most need for progress is in the field of both conventional and nuclear disarmament."

"If we and our allies could reach with you some measure of agreement on this issue it would be a real contribution to the reduction of world tensions and to the settlement of the many problems which now confront us."

Macmillan made these other main points:

An agreement on limitation or cessation of nuclear tests is not of itself an agreement for disarmament; it is no substitute for a wider agreement on conventional and nuclear weapons and a proper system of control. He called for immediate agreement on advance registration of tests and the presence of international observers on such occasions.

Britain cannot agree to extensive reductions in western defences without assurances of parallel settlements in the political field.

NATO is a defensive organization; Germany has the right to decide on her co-operation with other nations.

Why Should City Intervene?

THE City of Victoria, or any other municipality in the province, would be unwise to intervene in the disputed interpretation of the revised Municipal Act, a provincial statute. Responsibility for the statute as it stands rests squarely on the shoulders of the provincial government which presented the measure to the Legislature for enactment in that form. Interpretation of the law is the function of the courts; while law enforcement is directly under the guidance of the attorney-general. If any municipal council in B.C. by means of special by-law could change the meaning of a statute through cut-rate penalties, circumvention or otherwise, what meaning could any law have?

Meanwhile the first, and inescapable, responsibility is that of the provincial government. Attorney-General Bonner has some remedies, if he will apply them. He can put the weight of the Province on the side of conditional enforcement of the disputed sections in the statute, or temporarily waive that. He cannot rewrite the law without the assent of the Legislature; nor should he countenance any municipal ordinance proposed to circumvent an act of the provincial assembly. As a barrister, Mr. Bonner knows that, and knows too the damage that would follow any clumsy form of law evasion. As the senior law officer of the Province, he should announce the decision of the government with regard to the disputed sections of the statute. Will the Province waive prosecution, or will it not?

It is scarcely necessary to point out that the contentious sections of the revised Municipal Act deal with the livelihood of many individuals, and that damage could result to them from such faulty legislation. Would the city council be wise to step into that gap? Short of damages or other redress, the ambiguity of the law as written has irritated many people. It is the responsibility of the administration which presented the measure in the House to settle the tangle now. The government can ask confirmation in the courts of the affected sections; or declare formally that they are unenforceable in whole or in part; or state otherwise what it will now do. What it may not do is to deny all responsibility for the working out of this provincial statute.

A Case for Co-operation

WORK will begin tomorrow on the demolition of Point Ellice Bridge and its replacement by a new structure. Actual start on the new bridge is welcome but it means unavoidable inconvenience to those accustomed to use the Point Ellice route. This trafficway will be closed for at least five months, and civic officials bespeak public co-operation while the new bridge is being built.

The traffic load on the Johnson Street bridge will be greatly increased as a result of the Point Ellice closure, and citizens are asked to avoid the rush hour periods to prevent undue congestion. Residents of Victoria West and Esquimalt in particular will be affected, but their good sense can be relied upon to ease the situation as much as possible. As with a highway under construction—more so in fact—the building of a new bridge involves a certain amount of temporary dislocation. Most people will accept this as inescapable.

Concern previously expressed over the fire hazards of Victoria West because the water main over Point Ellice will be out while reconstruction takes place, should be allayed by the arrangements made to safeguard the area. Both the Esquimalt and the RCN's fire departments will be ready to lend a hand in any emergency. Assistance in this respect will be willing and friendly. All that is asked is that no call be made direct to the navy or to Esquimalt, but instead to the Victoria fire department as usual. If the persons concerned keep this in mind, as well as staying off the Johnson Street bridge at peak hours, then all will be well. Otherwise there will be needless confusion which might cause distress.

Confusing the Color-Blind

RED appears to be supplanting yellow as the background color of traffic "stop" signs, but even though it must reflect official agreement on what is the most striking color the change is open to question. Obviously there could have been no color-blind person among those who decided on red.

If it is accepted that the best color for traffic signals is the one most easily discernible to the most people, red fails the test. It shares with green the distinction of being the worst color of all for the guidance of those with imperfect color perception, whereas to them yellow is by far the best. Yellow stands out in good light or bad; red, if it can be distinguished at all under the best of conditions, disappears against a background containing greens or browns.

Color-blindness, a peculiar vision defect among men — hereditary and incurable—is far more prevalent than may be supposed, and in thousands of cases is not detected until the Ishihara test applied by the armed services is taken. Among men with imperfect color perception the largest proportion by a long way is composed of those in the red-green group, whereas lack of sensitivity to yellow is extremely rare. Since yellow is a strong color to people of normal vision and the strongest of all to the color-blind, what is the point of changing to red, which most of the latter cannot distinguish at all, or only under unusually favorable conditions? A color-blind man can discern a yellow road sign half a mile or more away, whereas red has no impact and the lettering is all that attracts attention.

Sensible Move

Proposals that the present high school course in British Columbia be reduced by one year will be welcomed by parents and taxpayers alike.

The so-called "enriched" high school courses which have kept the students in secondary school for an extra year have not produced any appreciable difference in the quality of product turned out by our schools, or if they have, it is not apparent to the average citizen.

School costs continue to zoom along with those in other sections of our economy.

Reducing the high school course by a year would help check this spiral and would not materially affect the calibre of students graduating from the schools.

Impossible Policy

The pendulum has swung far from the day when an employer could ride roughshod over a worker. In fact, the pendulum has swung so far that the worker would seem at times to be running roughshod over management.

Employers have been too willing to transfer to unions their functions with respect to employees. They are now having to fight to win back their former status and to regain the loyalty of the men and women who live on the income derived from services to their firm. It is a fight worth the effort. Even in industry peace at any price is an impossible policy.

This, then, next to that to keep markets, is the lumber industry's other fight.

All-Candidates' Meetings

Poor attendance at the majority of meetings sponsored by the four candidates in the recent political campaign in Comox-Alberni riding duplicated the pattern set in the provincial election. At numerous meetings held by individual candidates, average attendance was probably about 30, and 75 was considered a crowd.

Those figures again point up the value of all-candidate forums sponsored by commerce chambers or similar groups. They have always attracted good-sized crowds in Parksville, Courtenay and other centres.

Folk Festival

Everyone attending the annual Cumberland Folk Festival surely must have come away feeling they had experienced an evening, or two if they took in the entire show, of excellent entertainment presented in a program of varied and unusual theme.

We would like to think, too, that the festival as a meeting of people from many nations meant something more to the spectators than mere entertainment. Here was a grassroots appreciation of cultures for one another presented in an atmosphere that can't help but produce a better understanding among races and of different national backgrounds.

Gen. Pearkes' Stand

General Pearkes' service on the opposition side in the House of Commons from 1946 to this year will stand him in good stead as a member of John Diefenbaker's cabinet. Saanich residents take it for granted that he is destined to hold an important cabinet post. The general is pledged to support higher pensions for Canada's ex-servicemen and aged residents. His stand on marine extensions here is clearcut and was expressed as follows in a recent public address: "I have always advocated a year-round harbor at Sidney and have worked for it for 10 years. It is not my fault that we haven't been the government. I do not favor moving harbor facilities from Sidney except as a last resort."

Thinking Aloud

". . . of shoes—and ships—and sealing wax—of cabbages and kings."

By TOM TAYLOR

THINKING of one's own, memory is a peculiar thing. Shakespeare called it the warder of the brain but so often the warder is asleep or taking the day off. One can then be left badly in the lurch.

Only two weeks ago, walking along Vancouver's main street, I am not in the mood at the moment to concede it more than one. I heard my name called and turned to meet a chap I know almost if not quite as well as I know my right arm.

But his name? It flew out of mind, very much to my embarrassment for I had to introduce him to a companion.

I daresay memory plagued more than one candidate during the recent election campaign, when perhaps some ill-judged remark was recalled or some inconsistency held against him. Consistency is not the jewel it is cracked up to be, however, or at least I hope not for undoubtedly this column could be held against itself if anyone cared to browse among old issues.

* * *

But it was the Legionary which set me marvelling at the virtuosity of some people in recalling past events. I have constantly been amazed in fact by the wonderful recollective powers of old soldiers, some of whom seem to remember every single detail of years of active service. I set this down not in doubt but in dismay because I cannot begin to match them.

My warder, I fear, must have been given much home leave which I did not enjoy.

Legionary writers suffer no such disability, for each month there are racy accounts brought to the surface from the deep well of memory. In the issue before me, for example, one veteran recalls the D-Day landing whose anniversary passed here almost unnoticed, not surprisingly perhaps for there are now so many military anniversaries that one boggles at celebrating them all.

And fresh to him almost as the occasion itself is the picture of three comrades on their knees in a shell-shattered farmhouse, the bedlam of artillery making it impossible to sleep. Are they praying? Frankly, no. They are shooting dice.

If this seems to some an irreverent occupation under the circumstances, death waiting outside for the unwary or the unlucky, let me say, quietly, that we go freely to church today because of the gallant spirit of such a trio.

* * *

Another, older, writer in the Legionary recounts the first night he reported for duty in the Ypres Salient in that more ancient world war, the first one. He, perhaps, had ample reason never to forget it. He was riding a horse — company commanders did in those elegant days — but it was a wet evening and he was wearing a kilt. Obviously his brain warder would write this one down in red ink.

I could no more recall my very first sampling of trench life than take off tomorrow in a jet plane, and sad this and other lost memories are to my vanity. Not, I hope, that could I emulate the Legionary raconteurs I would inflict these on uninterested company, for I have long since realized that in not dying but merely fading away old soldiers are apt to cause their listeners to fade also.

One is not necessarily venerable because one is what we term an old soldier, of course. The proposition is purely relative, as my encounter with a Korean veteran immediately on his return, the down only just beginning to show on his chin, made astonishly clear. He it was I can remember that much, who refered to his D-Day precursors as old-fashioned artisans of the military trade!

That was not a blow at memory but it certainly would have been to the ego of the dice-playing trio had they heard him. Enough indeed to make their brain warders resign immediately. Mine, it so often seems, has never been on the job at all.

Letter from London

How Much Is an MP Worth?

By RICHARD L. THOMAS Daily Colonist Correspondent

WHAT is a member of parliament worth? The question is being asked anew in the rather paradoxical position in which Prime Minister Macmillan seems inclined to grant pay increases to members whilst trying to find a formula to prevent wage increases in industry. Even more difficult to justify is the suggestion that the increase should take the form of the equivalent of a $2,000-a-year tax-free allowance in addition to the basic salary of $2,700.

For centuries being a member of parliament was an honorary job, but in 1911 the principle of payment was established with a salary of approximately $850 a year. It was increased by 50 per cent in 1937 and in 1946 the Labor government raised it to its present level. In addition members have travelling facilities between Westminster and their constituencies. No one pretends that the parliamentary salary is really adequate in view of the demands of members, the cost of secretarial services and donations, but there is considerable argument as to the merit of the proposals to ease the burden. In 1954 it was agreed to provide a $5.50 expense allowance each day except Fridays when parliament was sitting.

The original idea of serving in parliament was to give public service to the nation. It meant, of course, that only wealthy people could afford to stand for parliament, and with the growth of radical parties it became obvious that government by the wealthy was not the ideal form of democratic government whatever undoubted merits it may have possessed. It was also designed, theoretically, to prevent payment of members by interested organizations to further their own ends.

The first Labor members were, of course, subsidized from party and union funds because they were poor men with no resources of their own other than what they were able to earn, and although parliament in those days was much more of a part-time job than it is today, it was often impossible for a man to obtain temporary employment on a basis which would enable him to sit in parliament without payment or subsidy.

The idealistic attitude that members of parliament should be completely independent of outside pressure in the form of payment is of course, even today, honored in the breach. Many organizations subsidize members in the form of grants, payments for professional services and nominal jobs carrying salaries and little or no work in order that the member may look after their interests at Westminster. Not all members have this second string to their fiddle, but many have.

* * *

The position in Britain at the moment is that the public are quite willing to pay members a reasonable salary but they are not willing to go to the somewhat fantastic limits of the United States, where being a senator or congressman is the equivalent of having one of the best paid jobs in the country. The idea that a member should make some sacrifice and that parliament should not become a job-seekers' paradise is still deep-rooted, and there is considerable resentment against the idea of a tax-free expense allowance on the grounds that it would make members a privileged section of the community legislating to their personal advantage.

The prime minister has soft-pedalled the original kite-flying idea of an expenses allowance, and government opinion is now veering round to a straight increase of salary with each member making his own claim for expenses and having the claim examined by the income tax people in exactly the same way as every other citizen. It is also recognized that the flat expense allowance would be unfair to distant members whose expenses are considerably more than London members who do not have to keep two homes going.

A suggestion now being considered is that members should be authorized to draw on the exchequer for approved expenses and that these would be met without any increase in salary. It would follow normal business practice and the system now in force for local government where services are free but bona-fide expenses are allowed.

The government is far from happy at public reaction. It is obvious that generally politicians are not held in exceptionally high regard and Labor members are finding it particularly difficult to justify their desire for increases when most of their constituents are earning about half as much as a member. The man who has no expenses outside normal domestic economy is difficult to convince that members have genuine expenses. There is also the graver psychological problem of trying to convince trades unionists that higher wages are not the solution to cost-of-living problems at a time when members are anxious to increase their own.

So far the government has kept parliamentary salaries at a freeze rate in the hope of giving an example to the country, the idea now is that as the example did not work they may as well join in the general scramble for higher pay. It is a situation not relished by the government the members of which, individually, are largely independent of parliamentary salaries anyway. At the same time there are many amongst their supporters who are finding the economic strain exceedingly difficult, and they have to be considered.

It seems probable, therefore, that members will give themselves a 75% increase in pay whilst preaching restraint to others unless a system of approved expense allowances is introduced, which may well prove the happier political solution.

The Packsack

OF GREGORY CLARK

IT being not too late to plant petunias, we might take a minute off to think about this most willing of all the plants in the world to join us in a little glorification.

It takes 40 minutes to dib in half a dozen boxes of the small petunia plants you buy at the garden shops. But it is not 40 days but four times 40 days that the plants will repay you for your labor with their homely, hearty, radiant small beauty. And there are few other plants of whom the same can be said. They bloom, you might say, from birth to death, not for just a couple of honeymoon weeks like so many others we can think of.

Horticultural historians can probably tell us when the petunia first moved into our lives, some generations ago. But it must have been within fairly modern times, as flowers go; because it is native to Central America, and all the myriad varieties of it stem from those found by the conquistadores who followed Columbus over here.

What a full-hearted flower it is! It thrives in borders, banks, rock walls, porch and window boxes, hanging baskets; it flourishes in petted city gardens and in the rock and sand of summer shanties in the north. It comes plain and fancy, striped, red, blue, white, frilled, giant, dwarf. It flowers all summer through, nor heat nor rain, neither blue nor grey restrains it.

Its name comes from the Indian word for tobacco, petun. But it belongs to one of the plant families that have contributed so enormously to the human story, the Solanaciae, which include tobacco, tomato, capsicum pepper, belladonna, henbane, nightshade and mandrake. As if all that were not enough, the petunia comes along, crying "Hi, there!"

Gardeners tell me that the smallest, slowest-growing seedlings will often if not always produce the best colors. Small, single-flowered types are generally the most prolific and hardy. But in recent years the colors, sizes and shapes have become so abundant that it is difficult to make a mistake. The last couple of years I have asked my garden shop man for a list of the names of petunias he has in boxes. And without knowing more, I pick 'em by name, alone, as one might pick a horse in a race.

The results are always a win.

Wet Campaign Opens

The Republican national convention in Chicago became a battleground for "wets" and "drys" as the anti-prohibition group tried to set in motion the ponderous machinery of changing the United States constitution. The 18th Amendment to that constitution had made the sale of alcohol illegal.

Since prohibition began, an army of moonshiners, bootleggers and gun-carrying magnates of crime had cheated and murdered their way to riches while catering to the great American thirst. The experiment had failed. Once started, however, it was difficult to stop.

In chicago, society women stood on street corners and offered buttons: "Vote Wet." Mayor Cermack and Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University, among others, spoke to a mass meeting urging repeal of the 18th amendment.

The Federal government decided to place its Doukhobor prisoners (sentenced for nude parading) on Piers Island . . . A new hydrographic survey ship, the William J. Stewart, built at Collingwood, Ont., was on her way to Victoria . . . First cougar seen at Gordon Head for 20 years was killed by J. W. Jones, warden of Elk Lake game farm . . . Fire destroyed the $1,000,000 Capilano Timber plant in North Vancouver.

WINSTON Churchill and Premier Richard McBride of British Columbia conferred on this province's financial future, 50 years ago.

The Imperial parliament had introduced an amendment to the British North America Act, readjusting the subsidies paid by the Dominion to the provinces.

The proposed settlement was to have contained the words "final and unalterable." But Premier McBride persuaded Mr. Churchill and his colleagues to remove those words.

Prospectors boring for minerals had tapped an artesian well at the summit of Mount Bodwell, Salt Spring Island. Water spouted from between the rocks to a height of 10 or 12 feet, and poured down the mountain.

THE Colonist was annoyed at the reception given in the British press to the Vancouver Island entry in Britain's Great Exhibition, 95 years ago.

"The Norfolk News thus briefly dismisses our corner in the Great Exhibition: 'Vancouver Island has furnished some most splendid stags' heads and horns, as well as a most beautiful collection of stuffed birds.'

"'Stags' heads and stuffed birds,' and not a word about our specimens of mineral, fossil and agricultural wealth!"

Pension Contrasts

Reading in today's Colonist (June 14) of the reward of $3,000 a year for getting our country in the mess that they they have during their occupancy of their snap jobs at Ottawa, it seems to us old-timers to be an awful farce.

I'm very much in doubt if any of those defeated ministers ever had to rough and tough it in the way we did in the early 1900's and now they are giving them $3,000 a year and expecting us old pioneers to subsist on $480 plus the insult of another $6 a month after the end of July and I suppose that they will get the $46 a month on top of the $3,000 [illegible]

I've lived in B.C. since 1899 and believe me things were pretty tough in those days, when we had to work and raise a family on $2.50 to $3 for a 10-hour day. We went through hardships which those $3,000 guys never experienced.

Centennial Memorial

The suggestion as reported in the June 4 Colonist that an addition to Kiwanis Village be built and specifically designated as a centennial memorial for Greater Victoria is a particularly worthy one, and one which citizens of the whole metropolitan area could approve.

While most of us are in sympathy with youth centres, and other projects of that nature, the provision of housing for our senior citizens seems a more appropriate memorial for our 100th anniversary.

It should be noted that the Kiwanis Village is designed to provide low rental accommodation for elderly persons and is open to citizens from any part of Greater Victoria, without discrimination as to race, color or creed.

In view of the high percentage of old people living in this area, it will be recognized as a project toward one of our greatest needs.

In deciding upon a memorial of lasting value, we should bear in mind not only the historic event which we would commemorate, but also the fact that our choice will testify to our present-day thinking. Let us be remembered for a thoughtful and generous attitude toward our older citizens.

Ex-Victorian's Success

I thought the following would be of interest to anyone who knew Mrs. A. J. Gibson, the pianist. She used to accompany most of our good singers here years ago. However she moved to Toronto with her young son and daughter, the boy, George, eventually going to Princeton University and becoming an architect.

He has just been to Ottawa, where he was called to receive a gold medal, with red ribbon, for architecture, and entertained for over a week.

Princeton University did a good job for him, as Mrs. Gibson says in her letter to me, and she is naturally very proud of him.

Splinter Parties

The editorial regarding multiple parties calls for some clarification. Just how would two parties be a guarantee against a stalemate? If my memory serves me right that was when we really had government stalemates.

The fact that the so-called splinter parties are increasing their numbers in parliament is proof that they are more popular with the people than the old parties and how anybody can figure that they should be discarded in favor of the old parties is beyond my comprehension.

It would seem the old parties see the writing on the wall and are trying to brainwash the voters into not doing something their better judgment has been telling them was the right thing to do.

Defying the Law

What manner of men are these Social Credit people who, according to news item, tell merchants to defy the law?

Regardless of how right or wrong the law may appear to be, it is the law, and for a member of the legislature publicly to advocate the defying of law seems to me, to say the least, frightening.

These are the people who, during the election campaign were talking of going to Ottawa!

Thank goodness the voting public, federally at least, turned "thumbs down" on them.

Writing on the Wall

Apparently the Liberal government needs another Daniel to interpret the handwriting on the wall. Daniel's interpretation of "Mene, Mene, Tekel, Upharsin," was:

Mene—God hath numbered thy kingdom, and finished it.

Tekel—Thou art weighed in the balance and found wanting.

The Car Corner

Well, Look at Austin Now Suddenly It's Got Glamour

By J. T. JONES.

Austin of England has certainly made some improvements in the A-55 for this year — in looks, performance and handling.

Last year's body design was novel in a restrained way, and appeared to be well thought out, but it just didn't come off.

Now its dubious features have been changed much for the better: notably those peculiar squared-off headlights and the result is a really handsome car, with a raked-back, cocky sort of look very different from earlier Austins.

I've never heard anything but praise for the reliability of Austins, but never before have their middle-sized sedans had glamor.

The new ones are a far cry from the shoulder-cramping A-40 in interior space, although the company still bills this one as a four or five-seater.

The A-55 can be had with Borg-Warner overdrive, a familiar fixture on domestic cars. While this unit lacks the instant manual control of the English Laycock-de Normanville design, it has its advantages.

Operating in the two top gears only, the overdrive gives six forward gear ratios and proves its worth in both city and highway driving.

In town, third gear with the overdrive turning itself on and off is almost as effective as an automatic transmission, except for full stops. On the highway the advantages of overdrive are too well known to detail here—silence and economy mainly.

The A-55's transmission is one of those four-speed boxes that has three useful speeds plus a bull low for mountain-goat work.

Here again, the operation is improved over past Austins. The column-mounted lever is smooth and fairly crisp in action, and the gear ratios, while not as close as the enthusiast might wish for, are a reasonable compromise.

The sturdy four-cylinder engine is still about 91 cubic inches and Driving position is really excellent, the wheel at arm's length if desired, for fast work on corners. The steering ratio is good and quick, too. All in all, this department leaves little to be desired.

One fairly minor objection is that the car's excellent road feel sometimes overdoes things, with some wheel bucking on hard bumps.

The A-55's ride is different from other cars'. On minor bumps, there's some bounce, as though the shock absorbers were not quite effective enough. But on really severe surfaces, the bouncing seems better controlled.

Road holding is good, with comforting stability on corners, although the A-50 doesn't tempt its driver to take the next bend a little faster than the last.

Workmanship on the car is, as usual with Austins, adequate and then some.

All in all, this model is so much better than its forerunners that those who may have shied off the make for one reason or another might well have another look.

When with present-day films boasting a wide exposure latitude which boils down to the simple fact that acceptable prints can be had from negatives which have been exposed most advantageously within this generous range, the problem of exposure may not concern you greatly. At least, not if you are content to accept technical quality which is more often than not a sizeable cut below excellence.

If, however, you are regularly shooting for considerably better than run-of-the-mill results, it behooves you to make careful and judicious use of a good photoelectric meter for accurate readings calculated to add a little extra "something" to your finished pictures. Color, particularly, reacts kindly to exposure accuracy. Despite the latitude inherent in most color films, variations of ½-stop, or less, can mean the difference between so-so results and something to crow about.

Something to really crow about, however, is the latitude of selection in cameras and supplies you will find at JUST-RITE PHOTOS LTD., 718 Yates St. Whether you are a brilliant beginner or a polished pro, we can fill your photo needs with proven products of consistently high performance. HEANEY'S

Now, a Few Suggestions To Improve Education

It's Too Important For Educators Only

By TONY EMERY

After the hullabaloo of Monday's election it was a change to listen to two teen-agers contending amicably for the presidency of a junior high school students' council. Both candidates had excellent athletic and academic records; both put their claims fluently but modestly before the electorate; either would make an excellent president. Would that all elections were a matter of choosing the better of two possible goods!

The boy and girl in this election impressed me with their mature grasp of the responsibilities and duties which democracy imposes, and in this I felt they were superior to European children of the same age. Canadian education has much to be proud of in this respect.

So far, so gentle. Having said that much you will perhaps permit me to offer certain constructive suggestions for the improvement of our educational system, as requested by a Duncan teacher.

First, I think our system is over-administered. Good teachers are indispensable, but I have never heard the same claim put forward for administrators. Montgomery's first act on taking over GHQ Cairo was to order the reduction of the staff from 3,000 to 1,500. How it was done was of no concern to him, and the result certainly justified his action.

Secondly, I suggest that no one be permitted a voice in educational policy in British Columbia who has not had at least two years' practical experience of some educational system outside the continent of North America. While I am by no means ashamed of English schools I will flaunt my objectivity by recommending Scotland, Switzerland, Norway, Sweden, Denmark and Finland for particular study, because they share some of our problems.

Too Much Bathwater

I am hinting that our educators have perhaps tended to accept rather uncritically a great deal of bathwater from Teachers' College Columbia along with our cherished democratic baby.

I confidently predict sweeping changes in the American schools over the next 30 years, changes which will be aimed at bringing American high schools into line with the French lycees, the English grammar schools, the Scottish academies and—most significantly — the Russian high schools. It would be foolish of us to trail tamely along behind.

Thirdly, I should like to see a Victoria grammar school set up under a principal with wide powers in matters of curriculum, choice of textbooks, the hiring of teachers and the firing of pupils.

If the school board can't afford it, let some wealthy citizen or group of citizens earn our undying gratitude by giving us a school which, without departing from the principles of true democracy, should be unashamedly academic in its standards in the classroom.

Fourthly, physical education might usefully be made a daily matter, not, as now, a weekly excursion into the mysteries of the Samba, or a gentle games-playing session. By the Kraus-Weber tests America's best pupils were below the European average for agility. Does this fact not speak for itself?

Not Enough Stress

Fifthly, I suggest that not enough stress is placed on the student's ability to express his or her own thoughts in fluent, correct and concise English. Much of the present trouble can be ascribed to the fact that only one language is commonly taught in the formative years.

If French and Latin grammar was being drilled into the student along with English grammar it is a safe bet that the average youngster would learn what a verb is rather earlier than is now the case.

The present "spiral" approach (no trade is more choked with impressive sounding but vague jargon than the pedagogical profession) to grammar only means that the quick learner gets hold of it first time and sighs with ennui at each annual repetition, while the slow learner never achieves more than half a grasp of the mechanics of language.

I could continue in this vein, but space grows short. May I conclude by saying that no civilization yet achieved anything by bringing up its children in strict accordance with the child's own wishes? "War," it was wittingly said, "is too serious a matter to be left to soldiers." Education, surely, is much too important to be entrusted to children—or educators.

Summer Upheaval Underway

By BRUCE LOWTHER

Summer may not start officially until the end of the week, but on the TV screens, the big upheaval caused by summer replacements already is underway.

Viewers are urged to watch this column and TV Talk carefully for changes; as many as are found will be listed. Some replacements won't be starting for several weeks; for example, channel 12 doesn't start Jimmy Durante re-runs for another week and Vic Damone and Red Skelton re-runs for another month.

* * *

Apart from the summer shows, there are less than a dozen this week coming in the "worthwhile" category. As usual, most are on Sunday, with Project 20 on Nazism, an ABC show on segregation and Odyssey in Mexico the highlights.

Doing it day-by-day:

Sunday, Project 20 (channel 4, 4 p.m.), "Segregation and the South" (channel 5, 5 p.m.), Odyssey shows an Easter festival in Mexico (channels 11 and 12, 5 p.m.), Mike Wallace talks to Mary Margaret McBride (channel 5, 10 p.m.).

Monday, Andres Segovia and Jan Peerce on Master Musicians (channel 2, 6 p.m.), Hank Bloomgarden goes for more on 21 (channel 4, 9 p.m.); Tuesday, a repeat of the Boone-Gisele-Gobel Chevy show (channels 2 and 6, 8 p.m.).

Wednesday, Lightweight champ Joe Brown takes on challenger Orlando Zulueta (channel 5, 7 p.m.), Patti Page goes dramatic on U.S. Steel Hour (channels 11 and 12, 7 p.m.); Thursday and Friday, absolutely nothing; Saturday, Channel 2 shows a Vancouver cricket match at 2 p.m.

* * *

As the quality of TV products goes down, the quality of old movies goes up. A good list starts with "Lady in the Lake" today and "The Senator Was Indiscreet" and "Gilbert and Sullivan" tomorrow.

Later in the week are such as "What Every Woman Knows," with Helen Hayes, "Home of the Brave," "Comrade X," "Trio," "Tight Little Island," "Man in the White Suit," "Sitting Pretty" and "Idiot's Delight."

New 'Thin Man' Series Planned for TV

Two decades ago, movie-goers were raving about "The Thin Man" series which starred William Powell and Myrna Loy, above, as Nick and Nora Charles. The original fox terrier, Asta, is shown with them. Now the same studio (MGM) plans a half-hour television series.

Stars of the new series—currently being shot—are Peter Lawford and Phyllis Kirk, shown with the new terrier star, also to be called Asta. The series will be about a private detective, Nick Charles, made famous in a series of books.

On the Record

Now Brace Yourself—Elvis Made a Dandy

By JIM TAYLOR

I guess it had to happen eventually. Six months ago I would have given 110-1 odds against it, but now the time has come and the shock is just beginning to wear off.

Elvis Presley has put out a good record.

Making a discovery like this is like finding a $100 bill while digging through a waste basket. In the past year and a half, Presley has bombarded the eardrums of the nation with a collection that must be the envy of every junk dealer.

Now, without fuss or fanfare, without drums and weird electric guitars, Elvis has put out a record you can actually enjoy without rocking and rolling all over the living room.

The disc in question is his latest, "Loving You" from the movie of the same name. He just stands in front of the mike and sings, getting, as usual, some great background from his Jordanaires. This thing is good enough so that I might break down and add a Presley record, the very first, to my collection.

That is, I would if it wasn't for the other side. It's called, quote, "Let Me Be Your Teddy Bear," and in it he begs his girl not to be a lion or a tiger. Enough said?

* * *

FACTS AND FIGURES: There was a total of $300,000,000 spent on records in the United States and Canada during 1956. And if you think that's lots of loot, try this. The 600,000 juke boxes picked up a grand total of $600,000,000. Music business has become a million-dollar baby . . . Frank Sinatra, who should know, picks Pat Boone as the best of the crop of new vocalists . . . Record experts are picking "genteel hillbilly," folk music with good orchestrations and a solid beat, as the next teenage craze.

* * *

NEW RELEASES: Eddie Fisher can't seem to buy a hit record anymore, so wife, Debbie Reynolds is having a shot at it, singing the title song from her movie, "Tammy." Unfortunately, if the record does go anywhere it will probably be on the Ames Brothers' version, which was put out some time ago . . . Norman Petty and his trio have put out a straight copy of their highly-successful "Almost Paradise" called "The First Kiss . . . ABC Paramount has come up with a new vocalist called Paul Anka, who has a good ballad in "Diana" . . . If you like terrific arrangements of jungle-type music, try the new Album "Exotica" by Martin Denny. All the cuts are wonderfully, especially "Quiet Village" . . . Ray Anthony is all excited about what he calls his new sound, "Chellophane."

PICKS OF THE WEEK: "Beach Party" by Bob Jaxon, "To The Aisle" by the Five Satins, and "Cool Shake" by the Del-Vikings.

Bombast, Syrup Just Don't Sell

By BRUCE LOWTHER

The buying tastes of many record collectors can be questioned these days, but at least they don't go in great numbers for the bombast of Richard Wagner and the syrup of Victor Herbert.

That piece of information turned up in a survey of Victoria recording stores about sales of opera recordings, one of the greatest benefits brought about by the emergence of LP's.

The consensus is that RCA Victor and Angel turn out the most and the best operas. "Carmen" and Italian operas are the big sellers and most of the buyers are "in the middle-age group, although people in their late 20's are turning to opera more and more."

Biggest seller right now is a recent RCA version of Verdi's "Aida," with Jussi Bjoerling, Zinka Milanov, Leonard Warren and Boris Christoff. Other standards are "Madame Butterfly," "Tosca," "La Traviata" and "Il Trovatore," and among the operettas, the big ones are "Merry Widow," "Desert Song" and "Student Prince."

Teen-agers will never go for opera in a big way, said one store owner, because "they're just too long for youngsters to sit still."

'Send Martin With Totem'

The provincial government should not forget to send Chief Mungo Martin to England with the Royal totem pole, the Indian Arts and Welfare Society decided Thursday.

The group passed a resolution suggesting that Chief Martin, the creator of B.C.'s centennial gift to the Queen, should be sent to London by the government.

Mrs. J. E. Godman who proposed the resolution said it was only right that he should be present when the Queen receives the 100-foot totem pole.

'I Will Wed Sonali' Says Rossellini

NEW DELHI (UP) — The distraught father of Indian beauty Sonali Das-Cupta told yesterday of his unsuccessful efforts to persuade her to give up her infatuation for Italian film director Roberto Rossellini. He said Rossellini told him he intended to marry Sonali.

The interview between Dr. K. Sen Roy and Rossellini took place at the Taj Mahal Hotel in Bombay.

Dr. Roy said he asked Rossellini:

"What are you after, Mr. Rossellini?"

"Nothing. What do you mean?" Rossellini replied.

"Sonali is with you, isn't she?"

"Yes."

"Why have you taken her from her husband?"

"We love each other. I love her and she loves me. We shall marry."

"You are inhuman. You are wrecking two homes."

According to Roy, Rossellini replied:

"How is it inhuman. Is it inhuman to love?"

Then, Sonali's father said, Rossellini said he would divorce Ingrid Bergman and marry Sonali. Roy demanded:

"Where will you live?"

"Anywhere. Here, Europe, anywhere," Rossellini replied.

The Ageless Stars

By Joe Hyams

'Make My Epitaph: A Good Actress'

A reporter who saw Ingrid Bergman recently in Paris commented that she looked as exuberant as a young girl with her first movie contract. "Do I really seem so happy?" she said. "I'm not aware of [illegible] over the bad times."

Now, at 40, she is returning to films and a fresh start with her career.

In a sense, Miss Bergman personifies the elements that make a star top box office. Anatole Litvak, who directed her Academy Award winning performance in "Anastasia," put his finger on the core of her appeal. He said, "Ingrid is a rare combination of great actress and great personality. These things last forever."

Despite the fact Miss Bergman had not been seen by the American people in almost seven years, 20th Century Fox paid $400,000 for the stage play "Anastasia" as a vehicle for her and paid her $250,000 to star in the film. Moreover, Fox executive producer Buddy Adler took on [illegible] project.

"Anastasia" is one of the studio's biggest hits. Mr. Adler claims the success of the film proves Miss Bergman is "no longer a controversial personality, but is highly accepted by American audiences."

The controversy surrounding Miss Bergman began in 1949 when, at the peak of her career, she met the Italian movie director Robert Rosselini. Miss Bergman had been married when very young to Dr. Peter Lindstrom, a Swedish dentist turned brain surgeon. They had one daughter, Pia, then 10. The marriage was not a happy one and Miss Bergman had reportedly asked Dr. Lindstrom for a divorce in 1946.

[illegible] to Italy to make a film with Rosselini she fell in love with the director. She tried unsuccessfully to get a divorce in five countries.

On Feb. 9, 1950, Dr. Lindstrom obtained a California divorce and Miss Bergman was free to marry Rosselini.

Miss Bergman was condemned from the pulpit, damned by the press, belittled and insulted by her Swedish countrymen. Her picture was turned face to the wall by film fans the world over.

After her second marriage Miss Bergman bore herself with quiet dignity and suffered the most incredibly rude affronts. Thanks to the passage of time, the strong, well-planned publicity campaign for "Anastasia" and the continuing memory of superb [illegible] appears once again to be at the top with an Oscar as a vote of confidence from Hollywood.

INGRID BERGMAN
. . . bad times over?

In a recent trans-Atlantic telephone interview Miss Bergman said she didn't expect people to be as kind as they were during her short visit to New York in December to accept the New York Critic Award for "Anastasia" — her first visit to America in seven years.

"It would be silly for me to say they have forgiven me," Miss Bergman said. "That's kind of presumptuous. I mean it's kind of presumptuous for one human being to forgive another one. I am not asking forgiveness. All I ask is: do you like the actress or not? And then let me live my life in peace [illegible] me."

Asked if she would return to Hollywood to make a film, Miss Bergman said, "If the picture required an American background and it was such a good story that I thought it was worth doing, I would come to America. But I prefer to stay in Europe. My husband is there, and the children go to European schools."

Miss Bergman said her big problem has to do with choosing a proper school for Roberto, her eldest son.

"I think it important for children to learn in school something they don't get from the teacher. They get it from one another. They learn how to live with other people. It's the most important lesson of all and it's the hardest. This much I [illegible] not play now. And I hope they will put on my gravestone: She acted on the very last day of her life. Here rests a good actress."

Miss Bergman said her chief consideration in choosing a part is not money but the part and the picture and who is going to direct it.

Miss Bergman is one of the few great film personalities who has maintained a career on stage as well as in films. In 1947, for example, she won the Antoinette Perry Award in New York for "Joan of Lorraine." When Helen Hayes presented the award she thanked Miss Bergman "for bringing the theatre back to Broadway."

Recently, a fan wrote Miss Bergman a letter suggesting that now she is at the top again she retire and not wait to be retired by age. Miss Bergman answered, "I am not frightened by age. Just think of the wonderful parts I can [illegible]

Film Admission Cut for Aged

Senior citizens in Victoria may obtain reduced rates for movies through "Golden Age" cards issued for any Odeon theatre in B.C., Victoria Odeon manager Jack Armstrong reports.

Fine Acting Didn't Help Worst Movie

HOLLYWOOD, Calif. (AP)—Anthony Quinn, one of the best actors ever produced by the movies, once appeared in a picture that surely must be one of the worst ever made.

Called Ride, Vaquero, Ride, it starred Ava Gardner and Robert Taylor and was an expensive and wholly unsuccessful attempt by MGM to capture the slow pace of the classic High Noon.

Quinn, playing a made-to-order role of a Mexican bandido, turned in a performance so superb that one critic wrote it looked as if he had ridden in from another sound stage.

SUPPORTING OSCARS

Quinn will tell you that it's a cinch to lift such a downbeat picture. The real test is to shine in a top drawer movie with top drawer performances from great stars.

Yet that is precisely the way Tony won both his Academy Awards for best supporting actor. In 1952 he appeared with Marlon Brando in Viva Zapata, a performance which some critics have called Brando's greatest.

At the last awards, Tony contended in the same picture, Lust For Life, with Kirk Douglas, who played the mad artist, Vincent van Gogh.

Douglas' van Gogh came across as a masterpiece of screen torment. Quinn played the boisterous, fun-loving artist, Gauguin, and was on screen only 7½ minutes little more than a bit part. Douglas didn't get an Oscar. Quinn got his second.

TWO GREATEST

No wonder director Elia Kazan recently said the two greatest actors on the screen today are Brando and Quinn.

To Quinn, work is the most important thing in life. He seldom takes a day off and once in Italy worked on three pictures simultaneously.

He's basically a hungry actor. He says:

"Do you know what it is to starve when you're a kid? I can't honestly ever remember leaving a table with my stomach filled. I didn't have my first square meal until I was 21.

"Steady work to me is an obsession because it means that my kids will never have to go through what I did."

STUDIED IN HOSPITAL

Tony was born in Mexico of an Irish father and a Mexican mother. His father died while Tony was young and the boy went to work in a mattress factory to help his mother support the family.

An accident sent him to hospital and he spent all his time in bed studying to pass an examination for Los Angeles Polytechnic High School. There he got interested in acting, writing and directing for the high school plays.

Badman Reminisces

Last Outlaw Fondly Rubs Old Six-Gun

TARZANA, Calif. (AP)—The last outlaw fondly stroked the barrel of a shiny old six-shooter. Squinting from beneath the low-pulled brim of his hat, Al Jennings, onetime badman of the Old West, said:

"There was no faster gunman in the world than me."

Jennings, at 93 as spry and cocky as a banty rooster, was sitting on the tree-shaded porch of his white frame house on a quiet street in this southern California town.

A little fellow—barely five feet tall—he seemed anything but the notorious gunfighter and train robber of a bygone era.

TV WESTERNS TERRIBLE

Jennings shuttled his thought between the wild days of his youth and the television westerns which he studies with considerable contempt.

"Most of 'em are terrible," he snorted. "I watch 'em just to laugh.

"Who ever heard of a real cowboy running around with a silk tablecloth around his neck?

"And fighting all over a room like they do is silly. I never saw but a few fist fights in my life. In the old days the fights never lasted longer than a couple of blows. That's all it took to settle things."

OUTSHOT JAMES BOYS

Jennings is mighty proud of his shooting prowess. He recalled:

"When I was 14 years old I ran into Jesse and Frank James in Dodge City. I had a .45 strapped on each side of me.

"Jesse asked me if I could shoot, and I said, 'Purty fair.'

"Jesse said he'd bet me 50 cents he and his brother could outshoot me. We put a bottle on a rock and Jesse and Frank both missed. I hit it the first shot."

Al was born in Virginia. When he was 11 years old, Al says, he ran away from home because his father killed his pet squirrel for stealing corn.

"I could always kill a man without batting an eye but I couldn't stand to see an animal harmed."

KNEW DALTONS, EARP

Jennings made his way to Cincinnati and then was swept westward in the flood tide of migration to a new frontier. He saw at close range men like the James brothers, the Dalton brothers, Bat Masterson, Doc Holiday, Wyatt Earp.

"I was standing around in Dodge City one day," he remembered. "Bat Masterson and some of his boys were hanging around. A man wearing a stovepipe hat and a long black coat got off the train. He was an actor, heading west, I learned later.

"Bat pulled his gun and said, 'I'll plug that hat.' He fired and the actor fell dead. 'Guess I shot too low,' Bat said."

Al rounded up a band of robbers and they started holding up trains and banks. He soon became the most notorious badman in Kansas, Oklahoma, Arkansas and Texas.

Jennings eventually was sentenced to life imprisonment but was paroled after five years. He later came to California and got into the movies as a technical adviser and writer.

They Get Sinatra We Get Richard

By BRUCE LOWTHER

Victoria's place in the world of entertainment—somewhere in the minor leagues—is illustrated graphically by two singers.

With the permission of Jim Taylor, who usually comments for The Daily Colonist on such things, and because several people have asked about Frank Sinatra's Vancouver program, this column will do a little comparing of Sinatra and Little Richard—and thereby of Victoria and bigger cities.

In Vancouver, Sinatra was late only because his plane was late. He gave the audience, even those behind the orchestra, his fullest attention, squelched hecklers in a decent way, belted out songs despite some hoarseness, and kept his shirt on.

In Victoria, Little Richard was almost two hours late and wouldn't even tell the promoter why. He spent most of his time on stage at the piano with his back to the crowd, screamed everything at the same maximum volume and deliberately removed all his clothes from the belt up to excite the teenagers.

HE NEEDS IT

To put it bluntly, Sinatra was about as high class as you'll get in the hit-parade business, while Little Richard was as low class as they come. The latter says he's "gonna get religion"—he needs it.

To draw the other comparison, Vancouver, where there are enough people to provide maximum profit in a minimum amount of time, will always draw the best talent.

On the other hand, Victoria will get only a minimum of the best.

WINTER SERIES

Famous Artists' winter series, on the face of it, seems to disprove this statement, but Vancouver gets twice as many attractions.

An auditorium is no blanket solution; there isn't any, unless the local population suddenly jumps to 500,000.

For those who asked, Sinatra sang, in order, You Make Me Feel So Young, It Happened in Monterey, Is It an Earthquake? (apparently brand-new), I Get a Kick Out of You, Just One of Those Things, Foggy Day, Lady Is a Tramp (twice at the first show), They Can't Take That Away From Me and I Won't Dance.

Intermission, then When Your Lover Has Gone, Violets For Your Furs, My Funny Valentine, Very Glad To Be Unhappy, One For My Baby, Lonesome Road (a terrific Nelson Riddle arrangement), Hey Jealous Lover, Young At Heart, Tender Trap and I've Got You Under My Skin.

DETESTS SONG

At night, he dropped a couple of the last group and added a new arrangement of his old Tommy Dorsey-era hit, Look At Me Now. At both shows, he prefaced Jealous Lover with the remark that "I absolutely detest this song."

Sinatra's orchestra, by the way, consisted of 10 brass, five saxes, four rhythm, five violins, two violas and a 'cello, led by Riddle.

Little Richard started with his hit, Lucille. All his numbers had different names but the same "tunes," except a rock 'n' roll version of By the Light of the Silvery Moon, which was an outright cacophonous horror.

But he made money, so why should he care?

Bride, 60, Waits For Love Slaver

MILAN, Italy (UP)—A handsome 30-year-old gypsy whose black eyes allegedly "bewitched" both young and old women, may be released from Milan jail soon.

He will be freed to enjoy a honeymoon with his 60-year-old bride, and to face a new trial for his alleged habit of whipping his "love slaves."

Johannes Frenot, the black-haired, fiery gypsy, married former actress Eva Rota, 60, in a secret ceremony which took place two months ago in Milan's St. Victor jail.

Frenot was serving a three month jail term for whipping Giovannie Baxio, a 22-year-old girl whom he had allegedly "bewitched" into a life of "love slavery."

Wealthy Eva Rota admitted falling in love with the fiery gypsy when his eyes kept throwing a barrage of "burning glances" in a Milan courtroom during his trial.

Reactor Ready for Roasting

This interior shot of the new 2,200-degree furnace at the VMD Bay Street plant in Victoria shows one of the firm's new reformer reactors for the oil industry being made ready for stress-relieving roasting. The VMD furnace is the largest in Canada west of Montreal. This reactor is going to the Ioco Refinery of Imperial Oil at Vancouver.

Death by Drilling

Oil May Choke Los Angeles

LOS ANGELES (NANA) — Ever-increasing desperation in the search for "black gold" has blown up into a crisis in Los Angeles affairs that has suddenly dwarfed every other municipal issue.

Stunned residents in the populous Cheviot Hills district are debating legal steps following a surprise decision by the city council throwing open their exclusive home area to oil-drilling interests.

Simultaneously, a warning is sounded that the move now surrenders all of the nation's third largest city to oil exploration, that in the next few years the 40-mile-long Los Angeles county basin, with no exclusions, will become a field of unsightly oil derricks. Odorous oil fumes would thus add to the eye-smarting smog, heretofore considered the city's gravest health problem.

Immediately after the council's green light was flashed, signs throughout the area indicated that the complete industrialization and deglamorization of this once tranquil, semi-tropical Pacific port, until a few years ago a mecca for sun-loving tourists the world over, would be pushed to a rapid conclusion.

Petitions for oil drilling rights in various other parts of the "City of Angels," including swank Beverly Hills, [illegible] wood and numerous sections of the fast-mushrooming San Fernando valley are tumbling into the city planning commission's office.

Now that a precedent has been established, city officials admitted that nothing could forestall their granting. Virtually all of the major oil interests and numerous independents were involved in the wild scramble for drilling rights.

First spark in the oil controversy was touched off three years ago when, after months of legal joustings with surrounding property owners, the 20th Century-Fox [illegible] sion to "slant-drill" under its 325-acre lot bordering Beverly Hills.

Drill approval for 20th-Fox, which is already netting $ 35,500 daily profit from its oil and natural gas output, made it clear to close observers that it would be a mere matter of months before successful pressure would be exerted by the oil companies in carrying their crusade into the residential area. Under these hopes, the geologists declare, gurgles one of the richest oil fields in the entire west coast.

Feebly organized property owners, marching to city hall for "protest" meetings at various junctures in the stubborn, fought negotiations, now apparently have come to the end of their rope. At the same time Los Angeles faced up to the eclipse of its far-flung fame as one of nature's most beautiful ad relaxing living sites.

Outside possibility that Mayor Norris Poulson would veto the ordinance or that a special election would be called to determine the issue through a public vote were the only faint hopes held by the anti-oilers today.

Meanwhile, the ominous prediction of Councilwoman Rosalind Wyman, who spearheaded the property owners' losing fight, was causing many a civic-minded resident to ponder.

"It is horrible to contemplate what will happen now," said Mrs. Wyman. "Los Angeles will make Oklahoma City look like a miniature!"

Saanich Growers Welcome Tariff

Saanich growers yesterday welcomed a minimum fixed valuation of 13½ cents a pound on fresh strawberries coming into Canada and a boost in frozen strawberries coming into the country.

"I am very pleased we are getting some relief," said Cordova Bay grower William Mattick.

However, growers were not clear as to how the new tariff against American fruit competition would work. They were not sure whether all berries would be charged a tariff to bring it up to the valuation, or whether all berries would be charged the regular 10 per cent duty on that valuation, or both.

Revenue Minister McCann said the new valuations would be in effect for the next six months in order to make possible "a return to Canadian growers close to the average price which prevailed in recent years for strawberries used for processing."

"Prices in the United States for fresh strawberries for processing are at exceptionally low levels as a result of rapid expansion of production in that country, especially California," Dr. McCann said. "Imported berries have recently been offered to Canadian processors at prices far below the prices paid by those processors to Canadian grower in recent years.

"There can be no doubt that this unusual market situation in the United States has been threatening and indeed causing serious injury to Canadian growers," he said.

Hottest Spot in Town

Victoria Machinery Depot has brought into use its new 2,200-degree-fahrenheit stress-relieving furnace to complete its order for $275,000 worth of cat cracking machinery for the oil industry.

The furnace, situated beside the old Point Ellice Bridge, is part of the VMD modernization program which will enable it to handle many new types of jobs for western Canada's fast-growing heavy industries.

The order of 11 reformer vessels is for Imperial Oil. Five of them have been ordered for the Ioco Refinery at Vancouver, while another six are for the Imperial Oil refinery at Winnipeg.

Each unit weighs 18 tons.

The materials used in the building of these vessels are high alloys designed to withstand extreme temperatures during the cracking processes at the refineries. The new furnace at VMD—the largest in Canada west of Montreal—is used to relieve welding strains in the units by roasting at over 2,000 degrees for 48 hours.

The construction of these vessels requires highly-skilled craftsmanship, and the fact that VMD has been selected by two leading oil engineering companies, Canadian Bechtel and Foster Wheeler Ltd., shows that the Victoria firm has won high regard for its ability to handle complicated jobs.

Another important service for B.C. industry is the manufacture of evaporators for the pulp and paper industry.

VMD has built 16 of these 65-tons evaporators for MacMillan and Bloedel's new Port Alberni plant and for the extension to the Crown Zellerbach mill at Duncan Bay during the past year.

The evaporators are used for recovering the black liquor used in the pulping process by means of evaporation and separation.

The value of the 16 units is $500,000.

Oil Experts Coming

Experts connected with the leading oil companies operating the new oil and gas fields in British Columbia are expected in Victoria June 27 to air their views on the spacing of oil and gas wells in British Columbia.

The B.C. petroleum and natural gas branch of the department of mines has called the hearing so that the operators may co-operate with the government in the drawing up of new regulations.

At the moment in B.C. only one oil well may be drilled on each 160 acres while gas wells may not be closer than one mile apart.

This is a more stringent regulation than in Alberta where the basic spacing is one well for each subdivision of 40 acres, varying in light of local requirements from 20 acres to 80 acres.

In Alberta, too, wells may be drilled only in the middle four of the 16 legal subdivisions that form a section. This is to stop operators from drilling on the edge of someone-else's property.

In B.C. the general rule is that no well may be drilled within half-a-mile of the permit boundary.

However, the question of spacing out the oil wells in B.C. is going to be more difficult than in Alberta where all the land is surveyed into townships and sections.

In northern B.C. only the Peace River block has been surveyed in this way, and most of the northern oil lands are logged on the grid system.

This divides the land into zones or units equivalent in area to quarter sections, but not necessarily regular in formation.

John Lineham, chief conservation engineer, says that the lack of surveying uniformity may cause some problems but he hopes that when the oil companies make their submissions a satisfactory solution will be reached covering the whole of B.C.

Lender on Top

Despite Canada's tight money policy, public debt financing in the first four months of 1957 was up 54 per cent on a year ago, according to a review by W. C. Pitfield and Company.

To raise these funds the borrowers have had to give the lender terms which viewed historically have seldom if ever been more favorable.

The Review points out that in its prior financing Bell Telephone first mortgage bonds averaged a yield of 3.57 per cent. The new bonds issued last March were a yield of 5.12 per cent.

With many other companies the interest rate needed to raise new capital was higher than the companies' operations could be reasonably expected to bear.

Because of this recourse has been made to the bond-equity type of financing in which either stock warrants or bonuses are attached.

W. C. Pitfield says this form of financing has been well received and expresses the view that it can result in satisfactory capital appreciation.

It then gives instances of many such recent issues which are already selling considerably above the issue price.

Hundred Boys At Bean Feed

Second annual bean feed of the Victoria Optimist Club, held Friday night at Woodsworth Hall, was attended by 100 boys from the Optimist soccer and baseball teams and public speaking, woodworking and boat-building classes.

Saanich Denies Tax Exemption

A request from Strawberry Vale Women's Institute to support tax exemption for institute halls was turned down by Saanich council Tuesday night.

The institute submitted a resolution calling for a change in the Municipal Act to be forwarded by councillors to the next session of Union of B.C. Municipalities.

Institute officials complained that they were not exempt from taxes although similar halls in unorganized areas are exempt. Council now is empowered to make grants to the institutes.

Classes in the two-day show are horticultural, decorative, table arrangements, niches, juvenile and educational.

Employers Silent

Glass Workers Accept Raise

Close to 26 glassworkers have voted to accept a conciliation board majority recommendation of a 40 cents an hour pay increase for journeymen, and 20 cents an hour boost for less skilled workers.

Their employers, Canadian Pittsburgh Industries, O'Neil Glass and Paint, Ltd. and Pacific Glass Ltd., all of Victoria, have not yet said whether they will accept the award.

The pay boost, spread over two years, would hike a journeyman's pay to $2.33 an hour for outside work and $2.23 for inside work, with a 20 cents jump retroactive to May 1, another 10 cents September 1, and the final 10 cents May 1, 1958.

Less skilled workers would increase their hourly wage to between $1.43 and $1.81 an hour, with the first 10 cent hike retroactive to May 1, and the final 10 cents April 1, 1958.

A minority report by employers' nominee E. E. Pearlman suggested a 10 cents an hour boost retroactive to May 1, and a further seven cents next year.

Majority report was submitted by C. G. Stone, chairman, and W. G. Gauld, employees' nominee.

Yukon Plan Spark to North

No other major development could give greater stimulus to the opening of Canada's north than the fulfilment of the Yukon hydro project, according to J. M. Wardle, consulting engineer of Northwest Power Industries Ltd.

Mr. Wardle was addressing the annual convention of the Engineering Institute of Canada at Banff last week.

He said that power development in northern areas was expensive and physical characteristics had to be favorable to obtain the low cost power that could compete with thermal generation near industrial areas.

He foresaw a northern limit being reached beyond which the north's water power would not be an economic proposition.

With regard to the Yukon project under consideration by the Ventures-Frobisher team, to raise 5,000,000 horsepower of electricity from the Yukon watershed, Mr. Wardle said the diversion to the Taku would probably impede navigation on the Yukon River.

He did not anticipate this causing any great international trouble with the United States, as navigation on the Yukon had practically ceased since 1955, but it was a problem which would have to be tackled diplomatically.

Suitable sites for industry to use the Yukon hydro power had been located on the south bank of the Taku River just east of the international boundry, and on the opposite side of the river there was another area which could be developed if required.

Ores treated here would not be dutiable and the products would go through U.S. Alaskan ports in bond.

The initial metallurgical plants might absorb about 1,000,000 horsepower, and there would be over 600,000 horsepower remaining for other industrial use. The climate did not pose any great problems, according to Mr. Wardle.

The Ventures-Frobisher team announced some time ago that it had postponed its development plans for the Yukon watershed and was looking to the Nass River instead as a more immediate project.

Good Deal in Oils

Holders of Canada Southern Oils 5 per cent convertible debentures are being made an offer, good until July 12, to make a conversion into the common stock of Canada Southern and allied companies at considerably more favorable terms than provided under the terms of the original trust deed.

The new conversion offer is for 113 shares of Canada Southern, 100 shares of Canso Natural Gas and 100 shares of Canso Oil Producers, for each $1,000 bond.

The original conversion was based on 60.5 shares of Canada Southern, 37.8 shares of Canso Natural Gas and 30.2 shares of Canso Oil Producers, and the bonds will return to this conversion basis for all those who do not accept the new offer by July 12.

Capt. Grant settled in Sooke, or Soke as it was known at that time, in 1849.

The cairn will be at the corner of Maple Avenue and the Sooke Highway.

Convention delegates will register at Grouse Nest Lodge at 2 p.m. Tuesday. The opening session an hour later will be followed by a reception and a dinner, at which Dr. Brock Chisholm is the guest speaker.

Delegates will tour the B.C. Electric hydro installations at Jordan River Wednesday afternoon as part of a trip along the west coast road.

At Point No Point, chamber members will be treated to a salmon barbecue later in the afternoon.

Duncan Disease Not Identified

DUNCAN—Disease which struck 17 Duncan area residents last week has not been definitely identified as psittacosis, but the disease is suggested by blood tests, Dr. E. W. R. Best, district health officer, said last night.

Two tests are necessary to definitely identify the disease, he said—the first gives a base level of antibodies in the blood and the second is checked against the first.

"If there is an appreciable rise in the number of antibodies present, then that is confirmatory evidence," he said.

Results of the second blood tests will not be known until the middle of next week, he said. First tests suggested the disease.

Psittacosis, commonly called parrot's disease because it is transmitted to humans by birds, was first hinted at when it was learned the 17 victims of the yet unidentified disease had all been connected with turkeys.

Winding up in a tie for first place in the city junior golf championships yesterday, 16-year-old Bill Wakeham of Uplands will meet clubmate Noel Dalziel today in an 18-hole playoff for the title. Wakeham had rounds of 80 and 78 yesterday, while Dalziel shot an 82 and had the best score of the day, a 76, in the second round. — (Colonist photos by Ted Harris.)

Two of the top contenders for the crown, won last year by Doug Munro, were Mike Kolb, left, and Dale Dalziel, the Uplands junior champion. A record entry of 34 golfers played the 36-hole competition at Uplands yesterday with seven juniors—K. Greenwood, R. Munduff, W. De Temple, Ken Brousseau, R. Ashton, J. McKay and M. Harcourt—also sharing in the prizes.

Farmers Beat Americans Twice As Garner, Worth in Top Form

Farmer Construction came up with its most impressive performance to date yesterday, lending credence to coach Ed Ash's pre-season prediction that the city club "would hold its own" in the fast Northwest Semi-Pro Baseball League.

Farmers got fine pitching and power-hitting to spare in sweeping a doubleheader, 4-2, and 16-1, from the powerful Seattle Serv-U Market. The double victory padded Farmers' already comfortable lead in the northern division.

Lefthander Bill Garner stopped Seattle cold with a two-hitter in the night game, and Farmers pounded three pitchers for a total of 19 hits, six of them for extra bases.

HANDCUFFS VISITORS

Garner was in complete control from the start. The only run he gave up came on one hit and a pair of errors in the third inning. He struck out six and walked one.

Lyle Cornett, replacing Stu Mitchell at third base for the twin bill, gave every indication that he intends to stay in the lineup. Cornett drove in two runs with three hits in four trips in the afternoon, then hit four times in six trips last night to bring in four runs.

Farmers started off with three runs in the first inning, when Charlie Boyd tripled with two on and came home on a single by Art Worth. They added five runs in the fourth inning, and scored in every inning from that point on.

Boyd, who missed the afternoon game, had two triples and a pair of singles in six trips.

The afternoon game was a pitching duel between Worth and Ernie Pastornickey.

Worth, as usual, started off in a rush. He struck out three men on 11 pitches in the second inning, but catcher Jim Harford dropped a third strike and Seattle went ahead, 1-0.

Farmers tied it up in the fifth and went ahead in the seventh on a triple by Mike Hodge, a walk and a two-run double by Cornett.

Salmonbellies Score Again; Nanaimo Signs Fulla, Ashbee

NANAIMO (Special)—Nanaimo Timbermen missed a chance to take the Inter-City Lacrosse League lead by themselves when they lost to New Westminster Salmonbellies, 13-9, but were heartened by news that playing strength has been bolstered.

Fred Fulla, all-star goalkeeper last year when the Timbermen won the Mann Cup, has come to terms with the club and will alternate with Alf Shuker. Fulla was in uniform last night but didn't play.

FRED FULLA
. . . Signed by Nanaimo

Expected Monday is Barry-Ashbee, younger brother of veteran Don Ashbee. The younger Ashbee, only 18, is a 190-pounder, and will probably see his first action on Wednesday night at Victoria. The Timbermen also hope to have Derry Davies, out with an ankle injury, back in action soon.

But they could have used player help last night, being outhustled badly by Salmonbellies, who forced the pace throughout and continually won the draws and loose balls.

Only the fine goaling of Shuker kept the score respectably close as the hustling New Westminster club took over at the start and kept control, except for a brief Nanaimo flurry in the fourth quarter which produced four quick goals.

Spud Morelli scored three for the Timbermen while Spunk Oddy, Billy Jobb, Vern Wilkie and Cliff Sepka each scored two for the visitors.

About 1,300 fans saw the game.

Yankees Closing Ground Fast; Braves Pad Lead as Reds Lose

Things aren't exactly panicky for the Chicago White Sox yet but the fact remains that they have had their American League lead over the New York Yankees whittled to three games from six in less than a week and there are growing indications the champions are at last ready to move.

The Yankees clobbered Kansas City Athletics last night, 9-2, with Bob Turley in rare pitching form and Bill Skowron still hitting the cover off the ball.

In the afternoon, Washington Senators finally won a game from the White Sox, after nine straight defeats. The score was 9-1 in an unusual affair in which Washington pitcher Russ Kemmerer gave up 12 hits but lost his shutout only because one of them was a home run by Jim Rivera. The other 11 Sox hits were wasted.

Detroit Tigers continued their drive by beating Boston Red Sox, 3-1, with Frank Lary just as tough in the clutches as Kemmerer. Lary was tagged for 11 hits.

Well-entrenched in third place, the Tigers are only two games behind the Yankees.

Billy Loes, one-time Dodger, continued his fine comeback by pitching Baltimore Orioles to an 8-3 win over Cleveland Indians. It was his sixth win.

DODGERS BEATEN

In the National League, Milwaukee Braves lengthened their lead to a game and a half by trimming Philadelphia Phillies, 7-2, while Cincinnati Reds and Brooklyn Dodgers were both losing.

Bob Buhl, getting better as the game progressed, held the Phils to four hits while the Braves slammed out 16 off four Philadelphia pitchers. Included were home runs by Hank Aaron—his 18th—and Del Rice, and four hits by Bobby Thomson, traded back to New York Giants later in the day.

Ted Kluszewski moved from hero to goat in one day as the Giants knocked off the Reds, 8-4, on the strength of a seven-run eighth inning.

An error by Kluszewski on a ground ball with two out set up seven unearned runs as the Giants followed the boot by getting two bases on balls and connecting for six singles.

Stan Musial, Del Ennis and Wally Moon hit home runs for five runs as St. Louis Cardinals edged the Dodgers, 6-5.

Musial's home run was his 13th and stretched his consecutive-game hitting streak to 14.

Perfect Game

Vern Kindsfather, 38-year-old veteran righthander who has pitched for Seattle Rainiers and the old Vancouver Capilanos, pitched a perfect game Saturday night as Salem blanked Eugene, 3-0, in the seven-inning opener of a Northwest League doubleheader.

Kindsfather, well-remembered by Victoria fans, struck out five in winning his eighth game of the season against four defeats.

Yanks Trade Martin to A's; Braves, Giants Reach Deal

Billy Martin, the scrappy second baseman whose 29th birthday was the reason for a night-club party which earned him and five teammates the wrong kind of publicity, has been traded to the Kansas City Athletics by the New York Yankees.

Martin's move to Kansas City was one of two big trades made just before yesterday's midnight deadline which could have a tremendous bearing on the pennant races in the American and National Leagues.

In the other trade, Milwaukee Braves made their bid for their first National League pennant by acquiring Red Schoendienst, veteran second-baseman, from the New York Giants.

As usual, the talent-rich Yankees gave up plenty to obtain the man they wanted this time hard-hitting Harry Simpson, a fellow who should solve their left-field problem for the next few years.

Simpson, a proven performer who was hitting .304 at the time of the trade, will join Mickey Mantle and Hank Bauer in the New York outfield. A lefthanded hitter, he will probably be spelled by Elston Howard on occasion when the Yanks face a southpaw pitcher.

ROOKIE PROSPECTS

For Simpson, the Athletics got Martin and three promising Yankee youngsters — pitcher Ralph Terry, who has a 1-1 record with the Yanks this season, and infielder Woody Held and outfielder Bob Martyn, who have been with Denver and Richmond, respectively.

Held, who barely failed to stick with the Yankees, may move in as the regular Kansas City shortstop. Martyn is considered a fine prospect.

The Yanks also picked up two other players—Ryne Duren, a fast-balling righthander who may have a future, and outfielder Jim Pisoni. Both will go to Denver while infielder Bobby Graff was optioned by the A's to the Yankees' Richmond farm club.

Schoendienst will plug a bothersome gap for the Braves and the 34-year-old veteran could be the difference in the pennant race.

To get him, the Milwaukee club gave up second-baseman Danny O'Connell as well as pitcher Ray Crone and outfielder Bobby Thomson, a former Giant.

Devine Beats Bishop In First-Round Upset

With one exception, matches went according to form in the first day's play of the Victoria Lawn Tennis and Badminton Club championship tournament.

Young Jerry Devine registered the only upset of the day, defeating veteran George Bishop in three sets, 6-2, 1-6, 6-2. Sid Hicks and Ron Gill played nearly two and one-half hours before Hicks won out, 7-5, 3-7, 9-7.

Remember When:

Johnny Vander Meer became the first pitcher in major league baseball to hurl two consecutive no-hit, no-run games 18 years ago yesterday. The Cincinnati southpaw, then 23, shut out the Dodgers 6-0 in Brooklyn's first night game, four days after he had yielded no hits when Cincinnati beat Boston Braves 3-0.

Cooper Drives to Win In Stock-Car Feature

A couple of veteran wheel-jockeys made all the big news at last night's stock car meet at Western Speedway.

About 3,500 fans turned out and watched Dave Cooper, "The Flying Plumber" of Island racing, win the main event, and Digger O'Dell better his own track record on the new paved oval.

O'Dell, who set the new record last week, cut it down in last night's time trials. O'Dell was clocked in at 20.65 seconds.

O'Dell also won the trophy dash, beating out Cooper and Len Johnson of Vancouver, and placed first in the second heat.

Only 12 of the 23 starters finished the 25-lap main event, which started off as a runaway for Billy Foster. Foster grabbed the lead on the second lap and was lapping other cars by the fifth lap.

However, he was forced out with motor trouble on the 19th lap. Cooper took over from there and was leading by 10 car lengths at the finish. Dick Willoughby finished second and O'Dell third.

Ken Dobbie was taken to Royal Jubilee Hospital with back injuries after rolling his car five times in the fourth heat. Extent of his injuries was not immediately known.

Lamont Brooks, the tracks' top driver when races were held on the old dirt surface, continued to have trouble on the pavement last night. Brooks rolled his car in the first heat his first spill in four years of racing.

San Diego Padres look as if they are finally straightened out and Hollywood Stars are close enough to threaten in third place but the Pacific Coast Baseball League yesterday continued to be a two-team fight between San Francisco Seals and Vancouver Mounties.

Both won yesterday, the Mounties getting a break on a 10th-inning error to beat the Stars, 7-4, while the Seals kept on missing Sacramento Solons, this time by 7-3.

Sandy Consuegra, the Cuban righthanded veteran, picked up the win for the Mounties when catcher Joe Naton dropped a perfect throw to the plate which would have retired the side without a run in the Vancouver 10th. The Mounties promptly scored two more runs.

Asingle by Charlie White, a double by Owen Friend and an intentional base on balls to Toby Atwell loaded the bags for the Mounties in the 10th, with one out.

Middlecoff, Mayer End in Tie After Great U.S. Open Finish

A sensational finish earned defending champion Cary Middlecoff right a tie for first place yesterday in a thrilling windup to the U.S. Open golf championships. Middlecoff shot two birdies and a par on the final three holes to catch Dick Mayer, who had [illegible] with a 282 total. Mayer [illegible] left, and Middlecoff [illegible] hole playoff today. Repeat Finish

TOLEDO, O. (UP)—Three years ago at the Olympic Country Club at San Francisco, Jack Fleck had to finish with two birdies and a par to tie Ben Hogan for the U.S. open golf championship.

Saturday, Cary Middlecoff needed two birdies and a par on the final three holes to tie Dick Mayer. He did it, too, and forced an 18 hole playoff today.

Fleck went on to beat Hogan, 69 to 72, in the playoff.

By OSCAR FRALEY

TOLEDO (UP)—Hollywood-handsome Dick Mayer and defending champion Cary Middlecoff, a pair of last ditch fighters of the fairway, both rammed home birdies on the final hole Saturday to finish in a tie at 282 for the U.S. Open golf championship.

Mayer, trying to get even for three years of frustration since the day he blew the Open on the last hole at Baltusrol, sank a 10 foot birdie putt for a par 36-34—70, to finish one shot ahead of broken-hearted Jimmy Demaret.

Then he stood helplessly by as Middlecoff [illegible] an ear piercing roar from the record [illegible] crowd of 15,500 fans by matching that 10 foot birdie putt on the final hole for a two under par 34-34—68 and a matching 282.

It was in a way another bit of heartbreak for Mayer, although he will get another chance today in this 18-hole playoff against the nerveless southerner.

Three years ago the collar and blood came up to the final hole at Baltusrol and he got his drive into an unplayable lie which cost him a double bogey and lost this same title to [illegible] named Ed Furgol.

Mystery Flu

By BENNIE TAYLOR

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — About two months ago a few people in a refugee camp along some dirty water ditches in Hong Kong came down with fever, body congestion, a cough, muscle aches and sore throat.

In Bangkok, dozens of crowded slums on the Asian side of the Pacific.

A few days later the fever developed in a girl nurse who came from the Philippines and Japan and died in a Hong Kong hospital. Two other persons died in Bangkok.

A total of 20 cases in the area and in Bangkok, in addition to the Philippines, Taiwan and Japan, followed.

That made it an epidemic in Southeast Asia.

And [illegible] Southeast Asia.

FAST MOVING

Dr. [illegible] Meyer said: "It turned out to be a new kind of flu bug — something for which no vaccine ever has been made. Medical science was caught with a fast-moving epidemic and nothing in its kit to fight the disease.

[illegible] Meyer said: "Here is where air travel turns up a new kind of health problem. The flu virus requires about three days to produce sickness. A newly infected person can board a plane in the Pacific area and go half way around the world before he shows symptoms of the disease.

The Old Logging Locomotive Soon Will Vanish Along With the Last of the Giant Timber

END OF AN ERA

By JOHN SHAW

THEY ARE CUTTING the last mighty stand of virgin fir in the world on Vancouver Island. It is a towering forest. Most of the crop, more than three centuries old, tops 230 feet. One of these giant logs contains enough lumber to build a six-room home.

A couple of weeks ago H. R. MacMillan was host to a party of people interested in the logging business and in reporting its developments.

The visitors travelled by bus and logging train and the men foresters, truck drivers, well known to the [illegible] were present as the guests of [illegible] companies. There was [illegible] crowded about them. They were comfortable and [illegible] from among the sometimes hideous roads between [illegible] quarters and the scene of logging and yarding is a fashion to relax a man.

Some of the things the visitors saw fascinate enough to the woodsman to be [illegible] were breath-taking. They stood on a vista of mountains and the sweep of the spacious Alberni canal. They stood in awe by the tumbling crystal clear Nitinat and even sampled the cool silk texture of the [illegible] water. They wondered at the vastness of this timber empire, where reforestation, natural and laboriously hand-planted, assures a multi-million-dollar industry of logs for lumber, pulp and paper for all time. And they stood in unfeigned awe among the still, but sometimes whispering, giants of this fabulous forest land.

They watched—some of them with almost consternation—as expert fallers, with power saws and the modern [illegible] hammer-headed axes cut and wedged and cut again and toppled one kingly proud fir amongst its diminished companions.

One, at least, felt like taking off his hat.

Mr. MacMillan [illegible] enthusiastically [illegible] the man who [illegible] MacMillan and [illegible] organization offered to the group gear him at the root of the toppled giant [illegible].

"I hate to see them fall," [illegible] admitted [illegible] although they [illegible] more than $[illegible] apiece.

The purpose of this particular trip was to show the process of timber cutting from logging railway, to truck transport.

Young Jim Tupper, [illegible] manager and a [illegible] forest engineer, stood up the steep road which [illegible] over a 1,000-foot deep valley, at the [illegible] logging [illegible] wound through the bottom and along the flanks of the hills to explain.

For one thing trucks can get into country practically inaccessible to a railway. Trucks have been used for that purpose in the past but in conjunction with a rail head. That necessitated a double handling operation. Two weeks in truck from truck to rail car and so to tidewater. Now the truck will haul [illegible] from the cold deck on the falling side to the sea.

Railroads are pretty costly things to operate. Of course the big diesel-powered Rolls Royce trucks are costly too, about $45,000 apiece. But roads are cheaper than railways. For example on the [illegible] from the National forests to the dumping point near Coneman Creek there are only two bridges on just over 240 feet. [illegible] truck will haul [illegible] of these requiring upkeep and [illegible].

Mr. Tupper and his colleagues reasoned this naturally and they estimated they could save money on the operation by converting to truck. Now they are abandoning the old-time steam locomotive and the string of clanking cars for diesel fumes and rubber tires.

So, with the vanishing forests goes an era. The era of the logging railway, colorful and [illegible] brightened by the characters who have worked in steam and grease through the years and who now will be retired along with their creaking [illegible] which will be made into [illegible] so is the whole picture of the logging operation in the woods. But the prospect as all [illegible] one looks at the [illegible] mills along Port Alberni [illegible] waterfront observes the [illegible] and growing community built by the wealth the forest brings.

In some respects the logger [illegible] a single [illegible] There's some risk in his work, of course. But [illegible] chance he'd [illegible] to be. Operators are safety conscious. There are [illegible] bush about [illegible] gear as there are for elimination of the hazards.

He lives a comfortable [illegible] dreamed of in another generation. He has bed sheets and pillow cases and [illegible] mattresses. He and his [illegible] above a [illegible] as [illegible] as any [illegible] and by some [illegible] to find even [illegible].

He eats in a mess hall, served [illegible] the choicest food purchased by expert chefs and [illegible] by trained [illegible] wonders [illegible].

He has recreations and [illegible] There's [illegible] and a library. There are sports. In the main camps there are family dwellings, a school, fire department and what have you. He, as the world he might be living on Park Boulevard or Joan Crescent, expects that he has the one of the wonders in his morning and the feel of the free wind from the sea and is surrounded by the beauty of a countryside that speaks like a concerto.

He sees things the city dweller only reads and hears about.

There is a [illegible] high and [illegible] water. When the river is at [illegible] there are 18 feet of [illegible] at [illegible]. Though the [illegible] but it [illegible] [illegible] the [illegible] said [illegible] at [illegible] feet [illegible] and [illegible] along the [illegible] back the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

ORDEAL of the CUTTY SARK BUCKO MATE A KILLER

By CHARLES SANKEY

CHAPTER TWO

OLD VANDERDECKEN WAS TRIUMPHANT. "It's foul weather all the way, it's doom and damnation for us all," he pronounced. The man never seemed to need sleep. Hour after hour during the night watches he would pad the deck in his bare feet muttering to himself.

However we got a fair start with a leading wind down to Cape Finisterre where we picked up the northeast trades. Then squaring away the yards we made a run for the Line. Studding sails and every rag of canvas that could be stuck on was ordered out for we had a record to keep up and another [illegible] the clipper Titania, a company whose was heard also for Anjer. We were [illegible] together and as we sailed for nearly four days when we drew apart with a [illegible] for a race to Sunda Straits.

Sailing on before the trades we reached the Line where we exchanged our fair wind for [illegible] and calms, very trying to the temper when coupled with the vertical heat of the sun and further by the discordant energies that made up our crew.

* * *

IT TOOK ONLY a few days to set the mate abusing and swearing at the Negroes, of whom only one was of any use as a sailor. The others he worked up at all sorts of trivial and worrying jobs.

This constant hazing and tormenting began to have its effect. Nerves were strained and tempers shortened day by day, until the fight between Francis and the mate brought the trouble to a head. The captain's firmness seemingly ended the incident, and no talking of what was to come clouded our anticipation of better sailing weather as we stood out to the South Atlantic.

We headed down the south Atlantic case hauled making a southwesterly course to latitude 40 degrees south where we picked up the west wind that forever blows round the southern seas. There is a legend that those seas are inhabited by a race of [illegible] people who delight in [illegible] free rides on ships and in [illegible] a real blow for [illegible] speed. [illegible] they must have known we were [illegible]. It was a grand experience showing what a ship like the Cutty Sark could do when driven by a captain [illegible]. Yes, it was cracking on and all the time.

EVERYONE KEEN

As usual at such times in some of [illegible] squabbles between officers and men every one seemed keen to make the best of the run and enjoy the experience. My old knowledge of [illegible] came in handy and I was [illegible] one of the [illegible] for Captain Wallace at [illegible]. The first mate [illegible] of me being at the wheel [illegible] at such a time, but I was left on the job though [illegible] and [illegible] the mate. As [illegible] when a [illegible] was [illegible] Francis was [illegible] and stepped out at [illegible].

[illegible] the wind began to come [illegible] and our top [illegible] sails and [illegible] sheets [illegible] got a heavy mauling. The men were sent aloft to bend a new lower fore topsail which they swayed aloft to "Blow! Boys! Blow!"

With a gallant ship and a
Bully crew
Blow boys blow!
We're light the boys to pull
Her through
For up aloft this sail must go
Row boys blow!

* * *

UP WENT the topsail in its steps, the men heartened by the chanty, but it was another thing to bend it. For two hours the men fought aloft, sweating and swearing, the footrope swinging and dipping as they braced against the tilting yard. It seemed an impossible task but set it must be and eventually was as our gallant little ship cleared herself of a green sea which rushed over the [illegible] and swept the length of the deck.

During the whole of this strenuous time our little clipper steered beautifully and our entire crew played up most gallantly, wishing only to give the ship the best chance to break the record. It was stand by the whole time, and eat and snooze when we could.

TIME PROBLEM

Soon after this event I heard from the second mate that there was some anxiety on account of a variation between our two chronometers and their rating. They had apparently got apart about five minutes of time or seventy miles in longitude. Unlike the Fantasie, we used to hear all about the navigation from Captain Wallace. He expected two of our berth to take sights for latitude and longitude on Sundays and then he would invite us down for dinner in his cabin with the officers. (Charles was the senior of four apprentices carried)

Shortly after we passed the longitude of St Pauls Island, which we gave a wide berth, we hauled northeasterly for Sunda Straits and in trimming sail a most serious row occured.

The mate was trimming sail in the middle watch. So that the sheet could be hauled aloft on the starboard side he roared out to Francis who was on the bitkend at fo'c'sle head "Let go track." No response. Again the mate roared out "Let go track." Whether Francis heard him or not, I know the order was not obeyed. This was too much for Burke Smith who was red where Francis was concerned and went for him on the jump. You bet.

What occurred in the next few seconds I do not know. We heard a short struggle in the [illegible] and [illegible] Francis was down and [illegible].

* * *

THE MATES [illegible] was that Francis had met him with an upressed hand strike. In the struggle the mate managed to get hold of it and brought it down with such force that he knocked the Negro senseless. The injured sailor was taken down to the bosun's deck aft but it was evident that his skull was fractured. He never regained consciousness and died three days later. The ship was hove to and we lowered the body over the side Captain Wallace reading the service.

After this the mate kept his cabin. The ship suddenly became quiet, the men going about their work in sullen silence with bitterness in their hearts and never a chanty to buck them up at the most tedious task. Though Francis was far from being popular among us the mate was openly despised. Old Vanderdecken's gloom enveloped the ship. Her run of bad luck had now fairly started. Captain Wallace took over the mates watch till we arrived at Anjer, from which we were about 10 days' sail.

CAUTION ADVISABLE

Arriving off the islands of Sumatra and Java the error in chronometer succeeded in fooling us badly. For though it does not matter being a bit out of position when there is lots of sea room it does not do to run chances of going on the rocks. So we kept well away from the entrance of the straits onto, we had attained the latitude then went running due east for Java Head.

Through the portals of these straits the fleets of sailing ships to and from China have made their way for many years. Situated almost in the Line the southeast trade winds are broken up at its entrance and dependence has to be put in every favourable shaft of breeze or zephyr. While on high seas are met it takes the highest class of seamanship to navigate from this point to various destinations in the China Seas [illegible].

Concluding: ED SULLIVAN'S STORY

LITTLE MAN MAKES GOOD

By JIM BISHOP

ONE OF THE THINGS Ed Sullivan lacks is quitting pride. Some have it. Some do not. This is a spurious form of snobbery which impels a man to resign when he knows he is not wanted. The Columbia Broadcasting System made it plain to the infant world of television that, in 1948, Sullivan was old and through. His show had been offered to any [illegible] with or without Sullivan.

He stood by, working twice as hard on his show, for daring to take a dollar out of the budget for himself or for his producer. He got Martin and Lewis to appear for $250; Lena Horne was paid $75. Billboard, a trade magazine said that Sullivan was using his connections to stop artists from appearing on his show.

Sullivan was angered. His eyes looked like little blueberries in apple dumplings as he showed up at Billboard's office with his show budget, his payments to artists under his arms. He proved that CBS gave him only $1,250 for the one hour show, and that neither Sullivan nor Martin Lewis had taken a dime in pay for their work.

The American Guild of Vaudeville Artists summoned the Mr. to appear on the same charge. Sonny Dunham, an old friend and father of Nancy Walker, actress, was on the board.

Sullivan, harassed and on the ropes, opened his books for the committee and argued that he had paid out every cent of the budget for talent and, if the pay scale was too low, it was not the Sullivans of the world who made it so but rather the American Guild of Vaudeville Artists who did not demand more from the tight fisted Czars of television like CBS. He proved, beyond argument that the most money he ever had left over from a show was $196 which he used the following week to buy better acts.

* * *

In Detroit, the Ford Motor Company was shopping for a television show for the Mercury Division. The car should have been selling to people who were buying Buicks and Oldsmobiles, and Ford was about ready to push Mercury.

The advertising department liked Ed of the town, because [illegible] it was getting in New York and Boston and Philadelphia and would soon be in Baltimore and Washington. (3) It was entertaining and seemed to have everything from niggers to vestal virgins. (4) It was a family show with early Sunday evening time, and it could be had without that painful hearing man named Sullivan.

The powers of Jimmy in Heaven must have been favorable. The general sales manager of Mercury was Joseph Bayne. This man was a [illegible] executive who had worked with Major Edward Bowes and Ed Sullivan. Bayne, the proper [illegible] organization [illegible] in spite of the fact that he was known to know the English language and rather prized his own syntax. A [illegible] had learned to [illegible] the [illegible].

The thing about the two of them," said Bayne to the Mercury people who were opposed to a Sullivan show, "is that [illegible] and truthfulness. We'll buy Sullivan for [illegible].

That was that. It was safe for three months. Sullivan knew he had exactly 90 days in which to show the Ford [illegible] and Sam Morris. He [illegible] the same hospital bed. He [illegible] to show CBS that they had made a grievous mistake in releasing him. [illegible] to find a way of [illegible] the [illegible] in working [illegible] which [illegible] "Then are you coming back to us?"

* * *

The people, however, are strange animals. They laughed at the Comedy Hour, but the faces were always different, and they wanted to see some familiar faces; even stone ones. So they went back to Ed. NBC tried Sammy Durante, Berle, Sinatra, Judy Holliday, Bob Hope. Ed beat them. NBC gritted its teeth and hired two torpedoes from the coast: Dean Martin and Jerry Lewis. Sullivan lost to them for awhile, and then drew abreast of them.

ED SULLIVAN

Comedy Hour, and for awhile it looked as though Sullivan could be kinded.

* * *

All this and no compensation, too. Sullivan almost implored the people to like his show. He tried to smile when he couldn't think of anything to smile about. The ulcer was in spasm, and, each morning the glamor man pumped out his stomach.

This is like the New York Yankees being [illegible] the girls' team of the Florence Crittendon Home. Ed did so well, in fact, that CBS negotiated a new contract with him in the summer of 1953 for [illegible] of $[illegible] a week for [illegible] and everybody [illegible] always [illegible] the [illegible] the first year, $[illegible] the second and $[illegible] for the remaining three. The network suggested that one of this Ed could be [illegible] $[illegible] for himself [illegible]. He was [illegible] to [illegible] [illegible] was a [illegible] [illegible] Ed knew what he meant would sing his [illegible] [illegible].

The Sullivans went off on a vacation. The car [illegible] Ed wanted to see [illegible] in [illegible] a place called Bay [illegible] a grand [illegible] Sylvia and [illegible] felt a warm [illegible] and said to the [illegible] "My family came from around here."

"Indeed?"

The date on which success [illegible] in on Sullivan whether the show was [illegible] Hospital last [illegible] Sunday night to NBC but [illegible].

The network wanted to negotiate a new contract with Ed. So, ironically, old NBC [illegible] turned out to be the [illegible] of the [illegible] TV episodes in Ed's life. NBC made a good offer. Sullivan brought it to CBS.

* * *

A legalistic war was on. CBC returned to Sullivan $125,000 of his salary which it had been holding in escrow. This forced Ed to pay full taxes on it at once. NBS said that Smiley would be appreciated on their network. They would even name the show after him.

Sullivan appealed to a lawyer named Arnold Grant for help. Mr. Grant took Sullivan to Music Corporation of America, theatrical agents and Sonya Werblin became Ed's bandleader. For a week the little man with the big ambition looked like he belonging bad in the old time movie tune.

When the Columbia Broadcasting System surrenders everything drops, including its corporate trousers. CBS gave Ed Sullivan a 2-year contract. The name of the program was changed to The Ed Sullivan Show. The weekly budget is $50,000, half for talent, half for producers, directors, band [illegible]

* * *

With all the money coming in, the Sullivans remain comparatively poor. Sylvia is the bookkeeper. She takes charge of all folding money, and makes all disbursements. When she and Ed ride a taxi to Pavilion for dinner, she sits without protest as her husband pays the [illegible] cents and gives the driver a quarter tip.

Their only vacation posses[illegible] besides Sylvia's mink coat. And a Renoir painting he bought for her birthday is a place called Kettletown Farm near Southbury, Conn. The Sullivans had never owned a house never lived in one. To get a down payment Ed had to go to his friends at CBS and borrow $25,000. The place is antique American about 165 acres. The house is sort of white bedspread on old spinning wheel. There are some cows. So far $[illegible] has been paid into Kettletown. $100,000 is owed in mortgages. The reason why the Sullivan bank account remains small, according to Sullivan, is because he likes to shoot craps.

Smiley is the complete boss of the show. He owns it. He runs it. He books acts 10 weeks in advance of the show and he never sees a rehearsal until five hours before the curtain goes up. At that time, Sullivan becomes a grim, tough man. One day he took a quick look at the low necklines on Esther Williams, Jeanne Crain and Kim Novak and he swallowed his lozenge. Mr. William Walstrom, wardrobe chief, was ordered to make tulle inserts for the three gowns.

When the lines came on stage that night the inserts not disappeared. Sullivan made a motion to Director Jerry Wexler. The girls were seen in [illegible] of television screens from the neck up.

Today Sullivan still lacks a good sense of perspective. He is the long-term king of television, the most enduring [illegible] on America. And yet he still worries at the newspapers [illegible] and would rather [illegible] facts.

Jack Van Volkenburg helped. He got Sullivan [illegible] asked him why he needed a producer. He Martin Lewis Sullivan got Lewis aside and said that if he played it smart he could [illegible] of the front himself a [illegible] masters of ceremonies without Sullivan. Of this [illegible] half goes into an escrow fund to be paid to him in his [illegible] years, if any. This leaves $1,000 per week. With [illegible] taxes this is $1,700 a week. This is $[illegible] more than the whole show cost [illegible] years ago.

The ice [illegible] hot for everyone but Ed.

Most of the weekday work now is on the phone arguing with agents about fees for stars or [illegible] conceptions of acts he may want to book, or flying off to Japan or to Paris or Rome to look at personalities who may be worth importing.

He can't [illegible] in paying for acts but Sullivan will save a dollar if [illegible] can. The Lena Horne [illegible] sang on his show [illegible] gets $1,000 for the [illegible] two songs. Canada Is the First Among Commonwealth Nations To Enlist Women in a Rapidly Expanding Navy

Wrens ARE BACK IN Service

★ ★ ★

IN JULY another class of women recruits for the Royal Canadian Navy will be setting out on the great adventure of basic training at HMCS Cornwallis.

It will be the fifth group to learn the rudiments of naval life and tradition on the parade ground and get the many interesting opportunities open to the girls who choose this way of serving Canada.

For the first time in the history of any Commonwealth navy, the RCN, for the past two years has been taking women into the regular classes of the service and finding they do a very good job too.

The WRENS, 6,783 Canadian women who served with the navy from 1942 to 1946, was completely disbanded after the war. Some of the younger Wrens have re-enlisted and a few are serving again as Wren officers.

The name Wren has been kept to denote rating but after eight weeks' basic training at the huge RCN establishment in Nova Scotia, the women take specialist courses along with the men in service, and eventually take their places at shore establishments. Most are now serving on the east or west coast.

The Wrens are housed in comfortable quarters, furnished similarly to college residences, and all forms of recreation, games and hobbies are encouraged.

Physical and mental qualifications for recruits are high, though matriculation is not a necessity. Applicants are wanted now for ward room attendants, looking after officers' quarters, operating stores, naval stores, armourers' mates, safety equipment and instrument jobs, all requiring grade 10 and for medical branch, grade 11.

Wrens also work in the medical branch, communications and seaward defence organization.

The pay is the same as for the men, starting at $100 a month on entry. Quarters and rations are provided wherever possible or a monthly subsistence allowance is paid. All uniforms are provided free and the Wren gets $8 monthly for kit upkeep.

For those who qualify in the trade groups, further allowances from $40 to $45 a month are made. A leading Wren earns $55 plus trade pay and a CPO first class may make well over $250.

The age for recruits is 18 to 30 years. The 19-year-old may enroll for two years, plus a further five-year term. Most of the present Wrens are in the 25-to-30-year group, enrolled for five years or more.

Women are eligible for full navy pensions. H.R.F.

PET PARK FOR VICTORIA?

POPULAR SPOT NEAR NANAIMO for many children and their parents this summer will be a pet park just off the Island Highway on Jingle Pot Road.

The pet park is operated by 45-year-old Rudy Bauersachs and his family and has been established some three years. Until recently, Rudy had ideas of gradually building the place up on his 16 acres of property and gradually going into the zoological business in a fairly big way.

His plans however have been [illegible] Mr. Hunter Ross [illegible] the strange type of animal. Although his approaches for a zoo was passed by the authorities, he still operates a pet park, the [illegible] of [illegible] and family [illegible] enough income.

"Welcome to Wales," They'll Mean When They Say:

"CROESO I CYMRU"

NEXT YEAR—from July 18 to July 26, to be exact—the eyes of the sports world will be focused on the little Principality of Wales, where the British Empire Games will be held in the capital city of Cardiff. This is one of the largest seaports and one of the most enterprising and up-to-date cities in Britain, whose function it will be to play host to the contestants from 31 countries in the Empire Commonwealth to whom invitations have been sent.

No definite details of the total numbers of competitors from the visiting countries are yet available, but up to the present I understand that England's team will comprise 276 members, Canada's 116, Scotland's 150, Pakistan's 30, and Australia's 80. A total of 1,100 athletes and officials is expected, and all will receive a hearty welcome from the hospitable people of Wales.

Besides the 31 contending countries, three others—Mauritius, Sierra Leone and North Borneo, who are not yet affiliate members of the British Empire and Commonwealth Games Federation, have applied for affiliation. The Isle of Man and Jersey also are expected to affiliate.

It is interesting to note that at their first participation in Olympic Games at Melbourne last year, the Kenya team contained members of all the three main races of the world—European, Asian and African.

Cardiff Castle and keep, one of the historically famous locations the country has been at pains to preserve. Wales is rich in ruins so, so to speak.

B.C.'S BIG DEAL

ALTHOUGH GREATER VICTORIA HAS BEEN ACCUSED of plodding, slowly and unsteadily, in its centennial celebration plans, the rest of the province has already set a brilliantly colorful pattern of events and projects.

An estimated $5,500,000 will be spent to show the rest of the world the booming progress of B.C. since gold was first discovered at Hill's Bar in the Fraser Canyon in 1858, and a Hudson's Bay Company factor became the colony's first governor at Langley. In all the miles of this vast western land there were only about 4,000 persons on that memorable day. Within the year there were 75,000.

Neighboring Oregon was envious—and even threatening. And it was a prudent move, urged by Sir James Douglas, that the colony was created under the protection of the Union Jack.

There has been talk of recreating the old bastion—and even a section of the pole palisades—of Fort Victoria. This is a view of a corner of the early fortifications, with the embrasures for the muzzle-loading cannon and the heavy shutters shown. Sir James Douglas ordered the construction of these defences and himself supervised their completion. That they were never required to be defended against an organized attack was a tribute to the administration of the day as well as to the character of the Indians.

Ginger Rogers Has a Simple Formula for Health, Youth and Beauty . . .

You're What You THINK

Advice to Milady

By LYDIA LANE

HOLLYWOOD—When Ginger Rogers appeared on a recent TV show in a form-fitting gown I was amazed at her youthfulness and beauty.

"I think she is more attractive now," a director confided, "than when she was making musicals with Fred Astaire."

[illegible]

Ginger has been doing a number of heavy performances and has been rehearsing for dancing again.

This is a great way to lose some weight and one of the most fitting exercises is the traditional workout [illegible]

"The hard part [illegible]" she answered. "You stand with your feet apart [illegible] above your head. Stretch and bend, touching your left foot with your right hand. When [illegible] your right foot with your left hand."

[illegible]

Lucky lady, she never wants to eat between meals . . . but that's only a minor matter so far as it affects her overall plan of healthful, restful living. Here Ginger Rogers tells her secrets.

THOUGHT FOR FOOD — By Muriel Wilson

For Father's Day

THIS IS THE AGE OF DEDICATED WEEKS . . . we have "Be Kind to Cats Week," "Read a Book Week," "Clean Up and Paint Up Week," "An Apple a Day Week."

I could think of more . . . "Tolerate Your Wife's Hat Week," "Help With the Dishes Week" or "Everyone Empty Their Own Ashtray Week."

We have Father's Day. But how can we do justice to this unsung member of the family in one day. Let's have a "Pamper Papa Week."

I know we've bought him a [illegible] socks (because we couldn't get the dancing [illegible] size) but let's go further. We could make his week easy enough [illegible] off from dishes [illegible] refraining from [illegible] demand for the use of the car and we could even postpone telling him about a certain item charged to his account.

If we put our minds to it there is [illegible] what lengths we might go to give him a whole happy week.

When you come to think about it fathers are really wonderful. I mean, what if they don't get certain important dates like wedding and Versailles and birthdays and what if they do wave the dropped over hollandaise and their sports on the barbecue flour? What if they do raise hell if you use their razor and insist on wearing their oldest hat just where you want them to make a good impression? What the heck I say. . . . He is still the jewel in our shortcake.

And speaking of shortcake what finer dessert can we [illegible]? Why first strawberries are coming in now and that's making him a real treat for a strawberry shortcake and serving him at least two pieces. Middle fresh sweet food and given as a [illegible] strawberry [illegible] will never [illegible] equal the fresh [illegible] garden variety. With fresh berries available there is no dessert can top the jewel like fresh sweet strawberry shortcake.

If you can have the biscuit type shortcake let's fix a new one for to go along. Salad oil. It makes a biscuit crisp on the outside and soft as a feather inside . . . Sift and measure two cups all-purpose flour into a bowl. Resift, adding three teaspoons baking powder and one teaspoon salt. Now pour salad oil to the depth of one-third into a standard measuring cup, add two thirds of a cup of milk and pour all at once into the flour mixture. Stir with a fork until the mixture cleans the sides of the bowl and rounds up into a ball.

Divide the dough in two pieces and pat out to one half-inch thickness between two pieces of wax paper, no flour is necessary. Bake in layer cake tins in a hot oven (450 degrees, for from 10 to 12 minutes. If you wish to make individual biscuits this quantity will make 16.

Crush and sweeten the strawberries and chill in the refrigerator. Have cream whipped and sweetened now. Time the biscuit to come out of the oven just before the time to put it together and serve. Split it while warm, butter and cream dessert. Lift one half together on our prettiest plate . . . first the warm biscuit well buttered, now the [illegible] berries and spread them right to the edge allowing the cream juice to mingle with the melting butter and dribble down the sides. Top with the top biscuit and more berries. Finally whipped cream over all and a few whole berries for prettiness' sake. Here my friends is a shortcake worthy of your "Mr. Wonderful."

DIET IS IMPORTANT

FOR BIRD AS FOR MAN

A woman recently asked an oil dealer if oil product would hurt her parakeets who had taken to drinking from the oil barrel. The dealer was somewhat startled by the question but assured her that the birds would not be harmed because they consumed such small quantities.

Despite that assurance I don't advise this kind of diet for your parakeets. If you want to keep your bird well fed see that it gets fresh water, fresh seed and a [illegible] treat and conditioning food plus water.

Although the parakeet is primarily a seed eater the wild birds also feed on sapping of grasses, fruits and vegetables. From time to time he picks up an insect or larva which supplies animal protein. These additional foods help round out his basic seed diet hence should be compensated for in his diet if captive.

The seeds you feed your parakeet should be a special mixture of Canadian canary and millet seeds. The conditioning food provides high protein vegetable and vitamin supplement. The food takes the place of the insects and occasional insects eaten by wild parakeets.

Diet is necessary for your parakeet's digestion because he has no teeth. The grit is kind of gravel is as important to your pet bird as your teeth are to you. The gravel he eats from the floor of his cage will be used in his gizzard to grind his food into easily digested form. It should be hard, sharp silica quartz thoroughly sifted and sterilized. Change it often enough to keep a fresh supply always available.

Alicia's Arts Are Ancient

Alicia Tubman . . . already a teacher.

By BERT BINNY

THE PARTICULAR SPECIALTIES of Alicia Tubman are acrobatic and adagio dancing.

Four thousand years ago in ancient Egypt she would have been put into extremely popular demand as an acrobatic dancer, valued by the priesthood and glorified by the general public as endowed with supernatural powers by the gods themselves.

Salome, the daughter of Herod was an amateur tango. Tumblers are mentioned in the Bible. Slit dresses always a peek (tights were well accepted).

There were lots of reasons to entertain the ancient Romans too.

Powell Writes New Philadelphia Story

PHILADELPHIA is one of those rare cities in the U.S., or the world for that matter, with a character and way of life, encrusted by history, which have set it apart in men's minds as something flavorful and individual.

While [illegible] in this [illegible] it is [illegible] enough, a city about which very few novels or plays have been written and it is seldom used as the setting for a story.

At the core of Philadelphia's character is its strong sense of [illegible] as [illegible] that [illegible] is true of Boston, for example, yet significantly different.

These differences, the unique spell of Philadelphia are caught skillfully in a new novel, The Philadelphian, by Richard Powell, a narrative mixture of social history, [illegible] and incident that deserves to be placed beside Page Barry's well-known play, The Philadelphia Story.

This story of [illegible] of a family struggling from humble poverty to the heights of wealth and power is a fascinating study of the [illegible] as well as [illegible] protagonists. Little wonder that it stood [illegible] the pull of [illegible] read and [illegible] the country.

It's a Life of Hardships and, Not Infrequently, of Heroism, For the Men and Women Who Guard the Rugged B.C. Coastline . . .

A GEORGE NICHOLSON STORY

As Told to JOHN SHAW

From Carmanah to the Charlottes

CARMANAH LIGHTHOUSE stands, an alert sentinel, on Vancouver Island's storm-scarred west coast, overlooking that section of the sea known to mariners as the graveyard of the Pacific.

Scores of ships and men have perished, over the years, within sight of the light whose beam has guided countless others to sanctuary.

Mr and Mrs Gerald Wellard for a long time were alone at Carmanah, only 55 miles from Victoria if you measure the distance with dividers, but sometimes as far as 30 days away for the round trip if you measure in time.

For example, it was last March that Mrs Wallard found it necessary to come to Victoria for medical treatment. It wasn't a serious illness, or Colonel Keith Dixon, the marine agent, would have taken emergency measures to bring the lightkeeper's wife to succour. So Mrs. Wellard started her journey more or less independently.

First, of course, she had to have permission from the marine agent to have the Bamfield lifeboat call for her. Carmanah's own small skiff is too tiny for the open sea journey to the cable station. So, after waiting several days for favorable weather, the lifeboat arrived March 7.

There was no assistant lightkeeper at Carmanah at the time, so Mr. Wellard had to leave his post, launch his skiff in the crashing surf which pounds the beach endlessly, carry his wife aboard and row out beyond the breakers. There the lifeboat waited.

The lifeboat made the trip around Cape Beale in just about four hours, but it was rough and uncomfortable, that passage.

At Bamfield there was an aircraft for Port Alberni, with Mrs. Wellard as passenger. And by bus and taxi her journey to her mother's home, 3180 Richmond, was completed. Mrs. Hannah Duck was delighted to see her daughter, a weary traveller who arrived at midnight. She had been on the move since early morning and she had travelled 220 miles.

Actually, Carmanah is the same distance from Victoria as Ladysmith.

Normally a husky man would travel by another route. He'd walk the lonesman's trail to Cloose, only eight miles away. But it's a rugged piece of country. Then, from Cloose, he'd hire an Indian to take him out to the Princess of Alberni, northbound for Alberni Canal ports. She doesn't call at Cloose southbound. And from Port Alberni the traveller would make his choice of transport. But the first stage of such a journey is too much for most women—especially an ailing one.

* * *

For her return trip, Mrs. Wellard, planned to travel aboard the government lighthouse tender Estevan, a formidable veteran of coast work, and she had Col. Dixon's permission. This is a small courtesy available to the families who man the more isolated light stations. The ship's work boat would have landed her on the beach close by Carmanah light—if the surf allowed it.

But it happened Estevan was far to the north, replacing buoys and landing provisions for other lighthouse keepers.

She might, of course, have taken Princess of Alberni to Cloose and walked that lonely eight-mile trail through bush, scrub, deadfalls and awkward gullies. But she decided to wait for the Estevan.

It wasn't until April 3 that the Estevan left Victoria with Mrs. Wellard on board. The trip would normally have taken six hours. But the weather, as so frequently happens on the coast, made it impossible to land a boat off Carmanah. So the ship by-passed Port Renfrew until conditions improved.

However, on April 5 [illegible] Mrs. Wellard was landed at Carmanah and was greeted 30 days after she had first set out for the Bamfield lifeboat.

At the same time the Estevan landed several tons of supplies, for that's her real job. And she brought along Mr. and Mrs. John R. S. Pipes and their three-year-old child to serve a tour of duty with the Wellards.

It's only fair to say that if there had been an emergency the Estevan would have raced for Carmanah no matter where she was or what she was doing—unless it was another emergency. In that case some other means of contact would have been found.

* * *

When Jerry Wellard was stricken with acute appendicitis two years ago an RCAF Canso was despatched to bring him out. But rough weather prevented a landing. So a helicopter was hurried to the lonely light.

It's only about four times a year the Estevan lands supplies for the lightkeeper. Anything needed between times must come from Cloose over that eight-mile trail. And it isn't just a matter of slogging into Cloose and ordering the stuff over the counter. You have to order from Victoria, the freight comes by Princess of Alberni and once again the Indians are called into service and land the order at the trail's end. But there's no place to store it there, no place for perishables.

Often, if weather interferes with landings at Cloose, mail and freight is put ashore at Port Renfrew. From that point an Indian fishboat might lift it within the next fortnight.

To vote, the lightkeepers must walk to Cloose. Mrs. Wellard can't negotiate the trail. Mr. Wellard can't leave the station if the weather is threatening. So for the past six years neither has balloted.

About the only visitors are crew members of the lighthouse tender, or the occasional fireman from Cloose, a timber cruiser and a wandering Indian.

And there were the 16 footsore and hungry Boy Scouts from Metchosin who tackled the trail from Renfrew to Bamfield. When one of them got lost Mr Wellard chartered the search.

* * *

Now and then the sea brings an unwilling visitor . . . as in the case of the American fisherman, in October, 1955.

[illegible]

Mrs. Wellard [illegible] It was no [illegible] for them to launch the skiff. So Mr. Wellard waded into the surf, fought through the undertow and—while Mrs. Wellard prayed—reached the fishboat, smothered in the pounding surf. He got a rope around the waist of the fisherman, pulled him after him through the sea and got him safely ashore.

For that exploit His Honor Frank M. Ross presented Gerald David Wellard one year later with the parchment award of the Royal Humane Society of Canada for saving life.

But in spite of the hardships and privations, the Wellards like the life at the light. She helps her husband, tends to her own flower and vegetable garden in season, tosses a few chickens in defiance of the prowling cougar and mink and the sweeping hawks. She has a good library, and they can talk with their friends by radio telephone.

That is the way of things at Carmanah. But some of the coast's lighthouses are within easy reach of a city or settlement. There, they enjoy such luxuries as fresh meat and vegetables and fruit. They can watch television or go to a movie.

* * *

Still, most are isolated. Langara and Cape St. James, at the north and south ends of the Queen Charlottes, for example, are just about as remote from civilization as any point on the globe. Pine Island, in Queen Charlotte Sound, and Carmanah are probably the most inaccessible.

Similarly isolated lighthouses on the American coast are served by helicopter. They bring mail, fresh milk, meat, fruit, vegetables. And they enable the station's family to see the rest of the world occasionally, without too great inconvenience.

The little group of people comprising the lighthouse personnel of B.C. never ceases to cope for similar service.

[illegible]

For going on seven years Carmanah lighthouse has been the home of Mary Wellard. She shares with her lightkeeper husband, Gerald, the responsibilities and many of the dangers of this primitive life. It is hard; but she is happy.

This Seattle troller was driven ashore at Carmanah and Mr. Wellard, in foreground, rescued the one man aboard. Soon after this photograph was taken, the little vessel was pounded to pieces in the surf.

For one act of heroism, Gerald Wellard received a parchment award from the hands of His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor, on behalf of the Royal Humane Society of Canada. Here he is pictured with Mary, his wife, and the governor.

Launching his skiff into the surf, Gerald Wellard goes out for the mail and provisions from a fishboat lying off-shore. This was the boat and the kind of water he had to tackle, in which he carried his wife to the waiting ship to get her to a doctor in Victoria.

Petition Demands Vote On Saanich Hall Plan

Breakfast in Bed for Dad Today

Father's Day may only come once a year, but if a man has a family like Joe Reid, 608 Cauliflower, he can be sure of lots of attention. Here he is being given breakfast in bed, including three cups of coffee by Bonnie, left, 18 months; Cathy, three years; Randy, 6; Linda, 7, who lower at back and Bev, [illegible]. Public Supports Ash's Lone Fight

In a surprise move, a petition bearing signatures of more than 1,100 Saanich ratepayers asking for a referendum on the proposed municipal hall addition will be submitted to council Monday by Reeve Arthur Ash.

There is no doubt we would have had hundreds more if we had been able to incorporate on this canvass to any degree.

Where Does High Fashion Come From?

Where does high fashion come from? When the dictators of the style world run low on ideas, a dip into the past can sometimes turn up fances and furbelows with old world charm and—as the accompanying commentary shows—commercial possibilities.

In a spirit of earnest clinical endeavor two Colonist researchers invaded the multi-colored world of the Theatrical Costume Shop, 1054 Fort Street, and returned after some hours with the findings presented here—which are not to be taken too seriously.

Since then, visitors through the centuries have been rewarded by glimpses of Pia's wronged spirit pacing the lofty ramparts. Dr. di Sorbello assured Some even claim she whispered to them.

Auxiliary Plays Possum With Hospital Gardener

By EILEEN TEARGUD

The gardener Mr. George Davies has nursed the grounds along from a sea of mud and bulldozer tracks to its present stretches of the fairest of green turf bordered by magnificent flowers. Under his loving but watchful eye not so much as a single dandelion has dared to show a yellow head and any stronger weeds have been sent to their happy hunting grounds with lightning speed by the head executioner.

"If you could wear that shoes," the ladies said to their friends, "it would be such a help. We mustn't make any holes in the lawn at the party."

"Well," said Mr. Davies, "I hear there is going to be a garden party this year."

"What a relief," said Dr. Watson wiping his brow.

"When did you find out?"

"About two weeks ago," said Mr. Davies. "My wife told me. She was riding on a bus and the woman sitting beside her mentioned she belonged to the WA to the Veterans Hospital. Said they were planning a garden party but it had to be kept quiet because everyone was afraid to tell that grouchy old so and so, the gardener."

In ancient Rome marriage by "confarreatio" by eating together was a strict rite to celebrate a wedding. Our modern wedding cake goes back to the cake which was needed for the legally binding confarreatio. The Roman wedding cake was a symbol of plenty. It was broken over the bride's head as a sign of abundance. Each of the guests took a piece of the cake home to ensure plentifulness for himself.

In China it is a custom that the bridegrooms family takes care of the cakes. They send little wedding cakes to the members of the bride's family, the so called "cakes of ceremony." The bride's family, in their turn, send the cakes of ceremony to other relations and friends of the family as wedding invitations.

TV TALK

By Bruce Lowther

For the first time a long-playing record album from a TV show has become a solid hit.

It's called Polly Bergen sings Helen Morgan, from the Playhouse 90 effort about the late blues singer. Sales have hit 50,000, considered very good in the trade, and it's far above the flops chalked up by other TV albums, notably Cinderella. Mickey Rooney sings George M. Cohan, Marco Polo, Tom Sawyer, Satins and Spurs and Stingiest Man in Town.

* * *

Polly Bergen, whose smash hit brought her offers from Gleason, Allen, Sullivan and others, originally chose Gleason but later decided not to appear with Ed Sullivan tonight.

The days biggest shows are "Segregation and the South" on ABC the last TV show financed by the Ford Foundation before it decided to give its all to research. Others worth watching today are Project 20 on Nazism, Odyssey and an Easter festival in Mexico. Mike Wallace and Jack Benny's season closes.

Marge and Gower Champion are on GE Theatre in a repeat. They have apparently done their last regular Sunday night show (which is a shame, since Favorite Husband returns follow Jack Benny next week. Another show CBS had big hopes for, the Spike Jones effort, has only two more Tuesdays to go.

* * *

TV COMMENTS: Steve Allen says Sid Caesar is the greatest comic of our day because he has been turning up material every week for eight years and only gets better." Allen says Caesar's only problem is that he submerges his personality in sketches.

Dr. I. M. Levitt, director of the Fels Planetarium in Philadelphia, suggests that stations drop "stupid movies in the morning, replacing them with daily 60-minute prime links on science, specifically earth satellites.

Then there was the day a couple of weeks ago when Ma Perkins wondered out loud on CBS radio where Doc Henderson was. In came a listener's letter which said, and we quote: "Please tell Ma Perkins not to worry about Doc Henderson. I heard him doing commercials on the Noodle Soup Hour, so he's all right."

"Don't know what happened—all of a sudden everything went black and white."

CRYSTAL BALL
And so goes the story of many fortune tellers and writers. We can't tell you which way the cat will jump in next week's issue of strawberries, but we might be wrong.
Meanwhile, looking through the June advertisements of Knowlton Nesbitt Limited, underwriting agents, we find that they are offering lumber at fantastic prices. Perhaps this is the way to go. Stewart & Hudson Ltd. is a leader in the general selection of quality building lumber for every purpose, and they would like to pass on bargain prices that are:
Air Dried Lumber per 1,000 ft.

1x6 Economy fir and hemlock T & G 35.00
2x4 Economy dressed 39.00

WHAT'S THIS
Hardwood plywood cheaper than ordinary fir plywood? We can answer this one either way, but here is one that is true. Avoid the stock mahogany plywood for panelling. Only 4x8 sheets, 6ft. 6in. 8ft. 6in. Then there's 3x8 ft. sheets $1.50 pounds for a piece of other stock, while it's a treasure.
REAL SPECIAL
Once upon an time, Alfie, in exploring, the factory made some tops and bottoms. Size 19x19x3/4, in. Hitch shadowback pearl grey, only $15.95 and there's only 3 of em.
PAPER LOSSES
Are there in my dictionary as something we can expect every year when the price goes down. Well, we can be the exception. We have wallpaper remnants we are selling at half price. The patterns are good and of the kind and the most fun things in the trade are remnants. Here are some remnants. The prices you will read next are half what they used to be. You can't run out. A Few Simple Precautions

Don't Turn Your Holiday Into a Burglars' Benefit

By J. EDGAR HOOVER
Director Federal Bureau of Investigation

WASHINGTON (NANA)—This summer, make sure that you don't join the ranks of those who thoughtlessly turn a vacation period into a "Be-Kind-to-Burglars Week." Unfortunately, this is easily done and many people guarantee themselves an unhappy homecoming by simple sins of omissions and commission.

What do these people do in "give the burglar a break?" First, they advertise their absence! The expert burglar makes a note of dates of departure in the social columns. He also checks for reassuring signs that his intended victims actually have left.

Such signs may be a note tucked in the door advising tradespeople that the owner is away and the date he expects to return. Bottles of sour milk and a pile of week-old papers shout that no one is home.

Window shades pulled to the sill, an empty garage with doors swinging wide, and an uncut lawn repeat the same message.

Often those who inadvertently give the burglar a break do so by thoughtless omission. They fail to tell their neighbors they are going on vacation or where they will be. They neglect to cancel deliveries. They fail to ask neighbors to remove advertising items from the porch, collect mail regularly, or keep an eye on the house.

They forget that police officers will check regularly on empty premises to make sure everything is all right.

But in order to do this, the police must know that a home is empty. If anything is amiss, the police will do their best to locate a vacationer and let him know of the emergency.

The chance that your empty house will not be burglarized is steadily lessening. Last year a total of 214,000 private residences such as yours, were robbed.

Does it shock you to realize that of the 525,720 burglaries reflected in the uniform crime reports bulletin for 1956, more than 40 per cent were of homes? Or that, in the same period, the property loss to robberies, burglaries, auto thefts and other larcenies was [illegible]

This tremendous loss, however, was offset by a police recovery rate of about 37 per cent.

A vacation can begin dangerously if one ignores the daily news accounts of robberies and murders committed by persons seeking rides.

The rider you pick up may place you in the headlines. Why take a chance of having your skull cracked or your car stolen? Don't gamble with the life of your family.

Car care can be vital on vacation. Make removal of the key from the ignition your constant habit. Always close the windows and lock the door on departure.

That package, camera, or luggage on the seat of an unattended car is a distinct invitation to break in. Clothes on a hanger are a real temptation.

Silver Threads Advice

Learn to Relax

Victoria's New Silver Threads Service is being watched with interest by Vancouver public welfare bodies, Director of this experimental community chest project, Glen Hamilton, spoke of its plans and activities before the B.C. conference on the needs and problems of the ageing, held last week in Vancouver.

The service provides volunteer visitors to invalid aged in nursing homes; it is compiling a housing registry, and is organizing a handicraft group.

Silver Threads will also act as a co-ordinating body for all organizations dealing with the problems of the aged. It is hoped that a downtown centre for Silver Threads members may soon be erected.

Mr. Hamilton, reporting on the conference, said life expectancy will continue to rise. In 15 years we may expect to live to 80. With the coming of automation, there will be less work for each wage-earner. Hours will become shorter, educational preparation longer and retirement sooner. This all added up to more leisure.

Housing projects for old people, it was said, should be small and scattered throughout all residential sections of a city so that they could feel themselves to be a part of their community.

Most of the aged requiring accommodation are widowed or unmarried, it was reported. Many projects recently constructed or under consideration were planned for the aged couple.

A woman member of the audience agreed with Mr. Hamilton on that point, and told the meeting of a housing project in which a big old house had been turned into suites for single men and women, with a central lounge for the use of all.

Within two months there were three weddings in that house. Six old people were made happy and, she added, it was a great saving of space in the building.

Dr. Marion Sherman of Victoria also attended the conference. She directs the Pastime Centre at Oak Bay Junction.

"We do not change as we grow older," said Dr. Sherman. "If we are childish and egotistical in youth, we become more so in old age. Emotionally sound people are likeable in youth and age.

"Therefore young people should prepare for old age by seeking to build a mature outlook and by learning to enjoy human companionship."

Dr. Sherman would like to see a Senior Citizens' Fortnight, during which the special problems and needs of the aged could be properly publicized.

THE VOICE OF ONE

By REV. DR. FRANK S. MORLEY

The conflict between the three great Protestant personalities—Barth, Niebuhr and Graham—is fascinating. Niebuhr recently berated Barth for not having something to say on the Hungarian tragedy. Now he belabors Graham for not speaking on the race issue and atomic warfare.

During the 1920s when theology had made an abject surrender to natural science, Karl Barth threw a prodigious inkpot at the devil of humanism. It was the greatest explosion in theology in a hundred years. Man, said Barth, was so lost in sin that he could never find God himself. God was the "Wholly Other." God must take the initiative. Man reaches God only through faith, not reason.

Barth would agree: "Whatever thy mind comes at, God is not that." God speaks

Bible and the Word of God are not identical. He decides all human efforts to change either society or the church.

There can be no doubt of Barth's courage. He has refused to bend his theology either from fear of his enemies or to please friends like Brunner. Despite his severe theology he has a warm, encouraging personality, human and humorous, with a passion for good music. He stood against Hitler and was driven from Germany. He has helped countless refugees.

Why Is He Silent?

On the other hand critics question whether Billy Graham "dares to preach the whole Gospel." Since he did not reply to Niebuhr's challenge to declare himself on race prejudice, is he silent lest he offend some supporters?

Some years ago Cecil Northcott, the British observer, charged that he peddled "an unthinking fundamentalism," a naive return to the 19th century refrain, "Get the individual right and you get the world right."

Such socially detached attitudes of Barth and Graham are anathema to the dynamic Reinhold Niebuhr, the most powerful theologian in the United States has produced. Like Graham and Barth, Niebuhr has had a shattering effect on shallow liberal theology and complacent humanism, but he has also been active in politics, where his sympathies are left of centre, and has supported a number of humanitarian causes. For him the Gospel must be relevant to social problems.

This zeal for social reform has led Niebuhr to the dangerous position that since the ethics of Jesus are impossible in this imperfect world we should adjust our attitudes to reality. It is our absolute duty to do what is relatively best.

Mackenzie King would have delighted him for King believed good politics to be the art of the possible. Unhappily, under such casuistry absolutes disappear, ideals are blurred, and too much can be justified.

Niebuhr is dismayed by the demands of Christ before he is overwhelmed by the redemption of Christ. The Christian life is only possible after the Christian salvation. Niebuhr becomes so absorbed by the weakness of man that he loses sight of God's redemptive power.

Primary Principle

The Gospel is greater than any man's conception of it. This fundamental principle has been stated by all three men. So Graham reaches down to the individual and brings him the peace of God. Graham's work is absolutely primary. How can we save society unless we first create saviours of society?

Nevertheless the Gospel cannot stop there. Truth is the gateway to goodness. Only when Zacheus had restored his ill-gotten gains did Jesus say, "This day has salvation come to this house."

Like Jesus also we must speak in particulars which offend society. Christianity is a religion of brotherhood and community. Consequently every great Christian evangelist has had an unlimited social passion and influence.

Stands Out

Doctor's Viewpoint

These Experts Reduce 'Repairmen's' Load

Doctors who enter the field of public health can be said to be running a race with those of us who turn to private practice. The race is to see whether the preventive medicine specialist can continue to cut down on the number of diseases which have to be treated by the practising physician, or "repair man."

Preventive medicine may never catch up completely with all of the problems, but the achievements of the past few decades have been so startling that public health and preventive medicine can be said to have unlimited horizons in the future.

The full scope of public health work is not always understood or appreciated. It should be, because we owe so much to this department of medicine.

Public health departments have assumed the responsibility for the practical application of preventive measures which should be spread to the whole community.

Thus it is that free inoculations against diphtheria, typhoid, tetanus and whooping cough have seen the almost complete disappearance of these conditions. Polio vaccine is now being made available free to school children, and soon perhaps to others.

Some idea of the value of proper preventive measures can be given by recalling a case in B.C. many years ago.

A man working around horses had an injury, but tetanus was not considered although it should have been. The man developed the disease, one of the most agonizing known. After many weeks of suffering and hundreds of thousands of units of serum, he recovered, at a heavy cost to the Workmen's Compensation Board for serum alone.

Today, one dose at a value of around $1.50 would have prevented the suffering. More than likely it would not happen at all today because a tetanus toxoid that develops immunity is given to all school children, with parents' permission.

Public health awareness has made milk a safe food. Those of us who practised medicine here 50 years ago can remember the ravages of disease borne by dirty milk and the improvement of this situation alone justifies all that has been done by public health in British Columbia.

Other aspects of public health work cover a wide area, but are linked together in their efforts to prevent disease and to establish conditions of living that will serve that purpose.

Thus we ask our public health doctors to give typhoid vaccinations, but at the same time ask them to clean up dairy herds so that no typhoid will be there in the first place.

They look into the kitchens of our restaurants, establish standards for the preparation of packaged foods, test samples of foods, medicines and even tobacco.

They undertake studies into such matters as maternal welfare, infant mortality, and the reason for drownings.

Much of what is done in this field is done without direct cost to the individual. We do pay for it of course through our taxes, but we are repaid many times over by being able to avoid expensive and tragic disease.

We have every right to be proud of the fact that we live in a country where prevention of disease and maintenance of high standards of cleanliness and sanitation is given a high priority by the medical profession and the government.

Wins Trip East

'Remark by Mother Pays Off for Boy, 14

A chance remark by a 14-year-old boy's mother last October has ended with a trip to Philadelphia and New York, sponsored by the Optimist Club, for a Victoria boy.

Leaving Monday, Robert Smith, son of Rev. and Mrs. C. B. Smith, 522 Trutch, is going to Philadelphia to represent Optimist district 13 at the international oratorical competitions.

The Optimists have also arranged a tour of New York City for the boys taking part in the competitions.

"Mom said to go down and find out about it," he continued. "They were nice fellows down there so I kept going and finally won out."

Robert won the Victoria contest in April and the district 13 championship at Saskatoon in May.

District 13 comprises Saskatchewan, Alberta, British Columbia, Oregon, Washington, Idaho, and Montana.

Robert, a grade 8 student at Central Junior High School, explained that the club started with debates on current affairs, with each of 13 members taking a different view.

"This," he said, "helped us get over our nervousness."

"He taught us everything we know," said Robert.

Driver Hurt In Triple Collision

Ian McLean Turner, 30, of 629 Cowper, escaped with cuts, bruises and shock Friday morning when his car was caught in the middle of a three-vehicle collision on Oak Bay Avenue.

A truck driven by Frank P. Mallory, 1139 Oscar, coming up behind, was in collision with Mr. Turner's car, which in turn collided with a car driven by Thomas C. Moulds, 2086 Windsor.

City police ambulance took Mr. Turner to Royal Jubilee Hospital, where he was treated and released.

Mural Misfires

Devilish Idea Rebounded

LONDON (Reuters) — A father who put a "terrifying" mural in his children's playroom so they would "grow up unafraid of anything" gave them a bad case of nerves and shattered his marriage.

The incident is reported by the National Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children in its annual report. It says the children, aged 9 and 7, had a playroom containing many toys, including an electric train. The father would not allow them to play in any other room.

Immediately in front of the door was "a terrifying mural painting in startling shades of red, yellow, green and black. It portrayed a kind of genie rising from a bottle, first in a thin streak and then expanding as it rose up the wall into a devilish figure with large horns on its head, tusks protruding from the mouth and outspread arms which ended in large claws or talons several inches long."

The reports say the effect of the picture was to "unnerve the children completely." They insisted on sleeping with their mother and "became a bundle of nerves." The father told a society inspector that "I want my children to grow up unafraid of anything and if they are afraid of a painting on the wall they have not much guts."

The society says that on its advice the mother obtained a separation order and the father disappeared.
